RUNAWAY HURTS 5 ALONG FIFTH AVENUE

Wild Horse, Dragging a Buggy, Pursued by a Wilder Auto, Which Runs Down Two Men.

THREW MOUNTED POLICEMAN

Fighting to Hold the Crazy Horse When His Own Mount Went Down with Him—Two Girls Injured.

Fifth Avenue was filled with automobiles and carriages at 5 o'clock yesterday afternoon when a horse attached to a runabout in which were two young women took fright at the sound of an automobile horn and ran away. The animal started at Ninetieth Street and was caught only after it had run part way through Mount Morris Park to 124th Street. In the runaway's course there was left a trail of injured persons, some of them hurt by the horse and others by an automobile, whose driver gave chase.

All told, five persons were left unconscious in the avenue or on the sidewalk beside the park wall. Passing autoists picked up four of them and carried them to the Mount Sinai Hospital. Worst injured is Policeman Daniel McClinchy, who is dying in the hospital. His right shoulder, right hip, and right leg are broken. His body is a mass of cuts and bruises and he has internal injuries.

Among the others injured are two young girls who were in the runabout. They are Josephine O'Connor, 18 years old, of 213 East 100th Street, and Ray Dubois, 17 years old, of 1,729 Lexington Avenue. Nathaniel Gladstone, a law student, of 318 West 117th Street, and William Volquowitz, a chauffeur of Leland and Westchester Avenues, the Bronx, were injured by the pursuing automobile.

Miss O'Connor and Miss Dubois are employed as stenographers in the National Cloak and Suit Company, of West Twenty-third Street, and there a young man driving the runabout, called for them yesterday afternoon at the close of their work.

They drove to Fifth Avenue and up that thoroughfare to Ninetieth Street where the young man's hat was blown off. He pulled the rig to the curbstone and giving Miss O'Connor the reins to hold jumped out to get his hat. It was then that the horse took fright at the honk of an auto horn.

At its first leap the horse got the bit between its teeth and started north on the avenue at full gallop. Miss O'Connor pulled on the reins, but her efforts never even slowed the horse up. There was much traffic in the street, but the runaway dodged autos and carriages by inches, and escaped a collision. It soon had a clear path up the middle of the avenue, for motorists and drivers who [illegible] learned of its approach by [illegible] and yells behind, and turned [illegible] the side streets or up against the [illegible]

[illegible]chey, a mounted man, attached [illegible] Arsenal station, was on his horse, [illegible] at Ninety-second Street and [illegible] Avenue. The runaway passed him [illegible], both girls screaming for help. [illegible] policeman spurred after the rig, [illegible] which the runaway avoided, as [illegible] a miracle, bothered the policeman, however, and he was unable at first [illegible] the runaway.

[illegible]ty-eighth Street it appeared as [illegible] the runaway would dash directly [illegible] approaching automobile, and with [illegible] of fright, Miss Dubois rose from [illegible] to which she had been clinging and leaped from the runabout. She struck heavily on the pavement and rolled over several times. Then she lay still, unconscious.

While a motorist behind picked her up McGlinchey kept after the runaway which had barely missed striking the automobile. By this time there were a dozen automobils in the chase, among them the car of Benjamin Werbelowsky of 808 Kosciusko Street, Brooklyn, in which Mr. Werbelowsky was riding with his fiancée, Miss Lillian Cohen of 63 West 140th Street. The car was driven by Benjamin Sones of 48 Garden Street, Brooklyn. The automobile was moving at high speed, skidding between the other cars and carriages with no slowing down.

It had almost overtaken the runaway when Gladstone turned out of 101th Street on his bicycle. The auto struck him and tossed him and his machine up against a fence across the sidewalk, where Gladstone lay senseless until another motorist picked him up. Sones did not stop.

At 109th Street Volquowitz had just finished cranking up his car in which his wife sat and was stepping around the hood to take his place in the seat when Sones's car hit him, throwing him under his own car, which the speeding automobile side-wiped as it went past.

Still Sones kept on, but McGlinchey was ahead of him, and at 110th Street he had almost overtaken the runaway when the animal turned on to the sidewalk and swept the runabout against the stone wall lining of the Park. The light vehicle crumbled to pieces as though it had been made of cardboard, and Miss O'Connor, who had stuck, clinging to the reins, was thrown out and rendered unconscious as she struck the wall.

But McClinchey had the horse now. As it leaped forward from the wreck of the runabout the policeman reached its bridle. Yet one piece of the carriage remained attached to the horse. It was part of one shaft, and as McClinchey's hand closed on the runaway's bridle this piece of shaft caught between the feet of Fatigue and threw the policeman's mount heavily. McClinchey went down beneath the horse, his feet fast in the stirrups, and for an instant both his own animal and the runaway kicked and trampled on him. His left eye was almost gouged out by the hoofs of one of the horses.

Then the runaway headed up the avenue again toward Mount Morris Park. Man after man ran into the street and tried to clutch the bridle of the speeding animal. One after another they were thrown off, and at last the horse reached Mount Morris Park, into which it dashed. [illegible] were filled with children and [illegible] women, many of the latter [illegible] babies. They fled in all directions. [illegible] horse kept to the road here, [illegible] near the entrance at 124th Street [illegible] Policeman Hollweg of the East [illegible] Station sighted it. As the [illegible] emerged from the park Hollweg [illegible] bridle, and though he was [illegible] many feet he stopped it.

[illegible] walked back down Fifth Avenue [illegible] the horse and looking for the [illegible] runabout. Crowds along the [illegible] him of the chase, and beside [illegible] he found Miss O'Connor, [illegible]conscious, the excited crowds in [illegible] having followed the runaway [illegible] the girl. Hollweg called [illegible] from Harlem Hospital, and [illegible] he revived the girl. He [illegible] she had a scalp wound and [illegible] right shoulder was sprained. [illegible] was suffering greatly from [illegible] insisted on going home, however, [illegible] Dr. Martin took her there.

[illegible] learning that the others had [illegible] to the Mount Sinai Hospital [illegible], went to the East 104th [illegible] to have the horse put in [illegible] stable. There he found Sones, [illegible] driven to the station after seeing [illegible] caught.

[illegible] was telling of the chase [illegible] Gladstone and Volquowitz, both [illegible], came in to complain that "a [illegible] motorist" had run them down. [illegible] stopped his account of the chase [illegible] and recognizing that he was [illegible] admitted it. He was arrested [illegible] for assault.

[illegible] Mount Sinai Hospital, meantime, [illegible] excited young man had inquired for [illegible] Dubois. UPTON SINCLAIR IN JAIL.

With Ten Others for Violating Delaware's Sunday Law.

Special to The New York Times.

WILMINGTON, Del., Aug. 1.—Upton Sinclair, the Socialist author and his ten associates of the Single Tax colony at Arden, Del., will serve eighteen hours each in the workhouse. George Brown, the philosophical Anarchist, who had suffered arrest and imprisonment in Arden, had the eleven men arrested yesterday for violating the Sunday blue law at the colony. The colonists were taken to prison to-night.

They pleaded guilty when arraigned before Magistrate Robertson, and were fined $4 and costs each, with the exception of Fred Steinline, an ice cream merchant, who was fined $8 and costs. They all refused to pay their fines, and went to jail. Besides Sinclair and Steinline, the prisoners include Prof. J. H. Garred of the Northeast Manual Training School, Fred Windle, a Philadelphia lawyer, and Don Stephens, son of Frank Stephens, rich founder of the colony.

Sinclair was charged with playing tennis. The others, with the exception of Steinline, were accused of playing baseball. Brown, their accuser, was arrested last week for breaking up a Single Tax meeting at the Colony and was fined $2. In default he served five days in jail. Sinclair declares to-night that he will organize an anti-blue law club and will apply for warrants for the arrest of all persons in Delaware who play games on Sunday. This may affect the Wilmington Country Club, of which Federal Judge George Gray is President, where golf is played every Sunday.

CRUISER NIOBE SINKING.

Nearly Full of Water, May Be Beached at Clarke's Harbor To-day.

CLARKE'S HARBOR, N. S., Aug. 1.—Her pumps unable to dispose of the water pouring in through the rents in her hull, the protected cruiser Niobe, flagship of Canada's Navy, which was impaled for five hours on Southwest Ledge, off Cape Sable, early Sunday morning, is sinking in this harbor, where she was towed following the accident. The warship is settling fast by the stern, and nearly every compartment has been flooded. At sunset not more than ten feet of the cruiser appeared above the surface of the water, and she is still settling.

The Niobe will be beached to-morrow unless it is found that the water can be controlled. The harbor was looked over to-day by naval engineers and a spot with a muddy bottom was marked out for beaching the cruiser if it is found necessary to do so. It is probable that the cruiser will have to be towed to the spot, as it is believed that nearly all her machinery has been rendered useless by the inrush of water.

Capt. B. W. McDonald, commander of the Niobe, to-day ordered 300 of the 500 men of the crew of the ship to leave the vessel. They were landed here and sent to Halifax, the Niobe's home port, by rail. It was said to-night that more of the sailors would be probably relieved to-morrow.

Capt. McDonald and the Dominion officials continue to withhold any official statement as to the cause of the Niobe's running aground.

THREW BABY FROM BARGE.

False Cry of Fire Puts Mother in a Frenzy—Baby Is Saved Unhurt.

While seated on the lower deck of the barge Susquehanna, in-bound for Jersey City from Locust Point Grove last night, in company with the barge Starina and the tug Atlas, Joseph McCann of Wayne and Colgate Streets, Jersey City, happened to hear an unusual noise on the upper deck.

He leaned far out to find what it was all about and saw a mother throw a six-months-old baby over the rail. The baby fell toward the water in easy reach of McCann's arms, and he caught it as it fell past him. The baby was unhurt, and never made so much as a whimper.

As McCann drew back seven men leaped overboard from the upper deck. They swam about in an excited manner, seeking the baby. McCann had a hard time to convince them by shouting and holding up the baby that it had never reached the water.

All the swimmers were members of the Hoboken life-saving crew, it turned out, who with their Captain were seated near the child's mother when she became hysterical and threw her baby overboard.

A false cry of "Fire" was the cause of her frenzy. It started upon the upper deck of the barge Susquehanna, and caused a panic of such extent that forty women had to have medical attendance after the excitement was passed.

GOV. DIX IS FISHING.

Denies Himself to Friends and Sends Regrets to County Fairs.

Special to The New York Times.

LAKE GEORGE, N. Y., Aug. 1.—Gov. John A. Dix is located at his Summer home at Lake George, beyond the reach of newspaper men and even cut off from personal friends, in order to obtain a much-needed rest after a busy time at Albany.

Le Grand C. Cramer of Troy called this morning, but Gov. Dix excused himself. Commander De Kay said he was writing regrets for the Governor in reply to many invitations to speak at county fairs in September. The adjourned session of the Legislature that begins Sept. 6 has completely disarranged the Governor's plans in this respect.

Commander De Kay said that the State Fair is probably the only event that Gov. Dix will be able to attend. The black bass fishing season opened at Lake George to-day, and the Governor is anticipating many fishing expeditions in the next few weeks.

The Governor's action in vetoing the bill containing the Albany investigation committee appropriation was due to the fact that he does not approve of lump appropriations without definite dispositions of the various amounts.

GRAND JURY ON DEFENSE.

Summoned Before Court, Accused by Lawyer in Dynamite Trial.

Special to The New York Times.

LOS ANGELES, Cal., Aug. 1.—Charged with prolonging its existence merely to harass the defense of the McNamara brothers, accused as dynamiters in connection with the blowing up of The Los Angeles Times, the county Grand Jury is itself to-morrow to be the subject of judicial inquisition. The contempt proceedings against George Behm, uncle of Ortie McManigal, chief witness against the McNamaras, have been postponed, and Judge Bordwell has ordered subpoenas issued for the members of the Grand Jury. The attorneys for the McNamaras made strong allegations against the members of the Grand Jury before Judge Bordwell to-day. The court was petitioned to order all Grand Jurymen to appear to testify in behalf of Behm, who was arrested for contempt, to prove that he had committed no contempt.

"This matter is before this court and not before the Grand Jury," said Clarence Darrow for the defense. "The Grand Jury is trying no case. It is in session to intimidate, harass, and browbeat every [illegible] we bring to Los Angeles to assist our case. Every one familiar with this Grand Jury knows its persecutions of other people."

GANG MAULS POLICE, RESCUES COMRADES

Two Uniformed Men Knocked Down and Their Prisoners Set Free.

HAD BEATEN TWO WOMEN

West Side Ruffians, Raiding West End Avenue Home for Beer Money, Fight When Refused.

Two youths, believed by the police to be members of the One-Armed gang, a notorious band of toughs which has been terrorizing the neighborhood of Sixty-third Street on the west side for some time, went to the apartment of Mrs. Margaret Flickner, on the third floor of 163 West End Avenue, last night and told Mrs. Flickner they wanted to see her son. She told the young men that her son was not in.

"You'll do, then," they said; "we want some beer money."

Mrs. Flickner told them she would give them no money, and began to close the door, when one of the men stuck his foot in and forced it open. The two then pounced on Mrs. Flickner, beating her with their fists. Her eighteen-year-old daughter, Katherine, was the only other person at home, and she went to the assistance of her mother, with the result that she, too, was beaten.

The young ruffians then became frightened as Mrs. Flickner and her daughter screamed for help. They ran to the street, but Mrs. Flickner followed them and saw them go into a saloon in Sixty-seventh Street. She then found Policeman Padrucco of the West Sixty-eighth Street Station. Padrucco met Patrolman Lockyer, and the two patrolmen went to the saloon and picked out two men whom Mrs. Flickner identified as those who had assaulted her.

The policemen were leading their prisoners to the station, when at Amsterdam Avenue one of them let out a warwhoop, which brought almost immediately about thirty gangsters, who knocked the policemen to the street, trampled on them, and rescued the prisoners. The men then scattered.

As the policemen scrambled to their feet they saw the men who had been taken from their custody running down Sixty-seventh Street toward the river. Padrucco fired four shots after them, and he says he believes he hit one of them, as he found a trail of blood afterward. The men got away, however, and, although detectives made an exhaustive search of the neighborhood, they found only the trail of blood, which led to the river front. The police believe that the men jumped into the river and swam a block or so to elude their pursuers.

Neither the Flickners nor the policemen were sufficiently injured to necessitate hospital treatment.

LANDS ON ARTIFICIAL FEET.

Girl Immigrant Admitted When Woman Benefactor Supplies Deficiency.

When Theresa Sabold arrived here on Feb. 4 from Bremen she was sent to St. Mary's Hospital, Hoboken, where both her feet were amputated. Yesterday she was discharged from the hospital and from the custody of the immigration officials and officially walked into the country on a pair of artificial feet provided by Mrs. A. G. Baine of 114 Stuyvesant Street, Arlington, N. J.

Mrs. Baine read in the newspapers that the girl, in order to get to the train that was to convey her from her home in Galicia to Bremen, had to walk thirty-eight miles over the mountains through snow and ice. When she got to Bremen her feet were badly frostbitten, but she thought that they would get better on the voyage. Instead gangrene poisoning set in and they had to be amputated in the hospital.

Yesterday her uncle, John Tokale of Lansford, Penn., went to the hospital and took his niece away with him to his home.

FISHING STEAMER TOWED IN.

The Seneca, Disabled Off the Banks, Brought Back by the Taurus.

More than an hour late as a result of an exciting experience off the Cholera Banks, about 15 miles southeast of Scotland Light, the steamboat Taurus of the Iron Steamboat Company's line, which makes daily fishing excursions, arrived at her pier at the Battery at 5:30 o'clock last night with the fishing boat Seneca in tow. The Seneca, a 90-foot schooner remodeled, came to grief as a result of an accident to her boilers. She was in a helpless condition and her 100 passengers were despairing of getting back to the city by nightfall when the Taurus, in charge of Capt. Allen, hove in sight on her return trip.

Capt. Allen signalled that he would give aid and none of the 500 passengers complained as they enjoyed the novel experience of going to the relief of a disabled craft. The boats arrived without mishap at Pier 1, where the Taurus docks.

TO SIGN TREATIES TO-MORROW

Taft Expects to Send Them to the Senate Before It Adjourns.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 1.—The general arbitration treaties between the United States and Great Britain and France, respectively, will be signed at 3 o'clock on Thursday afternoon in President Taft's office at the White House.

Ambassador Bryce will sign the British treaty jointly with Secretary of State Knox, and the French treaty, after it is signed by Secretary Knox, will be dispatched by special messenger to Paris to exchange for the one bearing the signature of M. Selves, French Minister of Foreign Affairs.

The President said that he expected to send the Anglo-American treaty and probably the treaty with France to the Senate before the special session adjourns, and is hopeful of quick action by that body.

DRILL FINDS MINER SAFE AFTER 52 HOURS

Joseph Cleary, Buried in Drift Since Sunday, Calls Up for a Cigarette.

IN WATER 75 FEET DOWN

Gets Food and Coffee Through Drill Hole, but Refuses Whisky—May Be Out by To-night.

Special to The New York Times.

JOPLIN, Mo., Aug. 1.—The fourth drill hole, sunk at noon to-day in the drift of the mine east of here, which caved in July 30, burying a miner alive, found the cave seventy-five feet underground where Joseph Cleary had been imprisoned for fifty-two hours. The rescuers heard his first faint "Hello!" soon afterward, when the drill was lifted.

Cleary seemed not in the least unnerved. He said he had been standing in water to his armpits, and that he had not slept, but that he had heard the constant rumbling of the drill, and he felt sure he would be rescued.

Dr. J. Will Barker and Dr. J. Duwed were at the drill when the shout went up announcing success. Dr. Barker put his face over the six-inch drill shaft.

"How are you, Joe!" he shouted.

"Awful hungry," came back clear. "I am standing in watetr up to my armpits now."

"We'll have you out pretty soon," said the doctor. "Here comes some food on a rope."

"Say," shouted Cleary, "did you find any good ore in that shaft where it caved in?" A bucket containing hot food, a small pail of coffee, and a bottle of whisky was lowered, and for a space there was no word from the hole. Then Cleary called to "Hoist."

"I am sending back the whisky," he called. "I don't believe I want it."

Then he told what he could learn of his prison. He said that where the hole came in there was deep water, but that on a slope twenty feet away, there was a nook he can crawl on to and be out of the water.

"It is lots better here now than it was before," he said. "I believe the air was getting bad, but I can wait now all right."

A rope was lowered through the hole, and it was arranged that Cleary was to pull three times if he wanted it to be drawn up. This was in case the water rose, so that he could be hoisted nearer the roof of his cave.

"Do you think it would be safe to send me down some cigarettes?" Cleary asked when the signals were arranged. "It's awful cold down here." The doctors thought it best not to send the cigarettes.

The shaft being sunk by miners working in thirty-minute shifts is now at the sixty-one-foot level. It is believed it will have reached Cleary's level to-morrow night, and that he will be brought above ground then.

Over the telephone to-night from the drift Clary told of his experiences under the ground.

"I was a bit scared when the cave-in came," he said, "but had presence of mind enough to run into the drift and escaped uninjured. When I realized that I was buried in the drift I just took things easy, knowing that the boys would get me out as soon as they could reach me.

"As I stand under the drill hole the water reaches my breast, but when I go to the end of the drift the water cannot reach me, for the ground is cut higher there than under the drill hole. I spend my time in the dry end of the drift. All the time they were drilling I heard the sounds of the bit, but in the darkness I could not locate the sounds. The second drill hole cut into the side of the drift, but it seemed impossible for me to find it.

"I felt the fresh air and shouted as loud as I could, but the boys could not hear me. Then I heard the drill start in a new location, and knew it was impossible to make them hear. All the while the darkness in the drift was intense, and I could not locate sounds. They came from everywhere first, at one place and then at another. So I just sat in the dry part of the drift and waited. I don't know what day it is, but it seems to be that it ought to be about Tuesday. It seemed a mighty long time while I was waiting. You bet I'm all right; I'm well and haven't a scratch on me. The air is good and the water is not strong."

SEARCHLIGHT SAVES THREE.

Guides Colonial Yacht Club Rescuers to Drowning Men.

A lawn fête at the Colonial Yacht Club, on the Hudson River, at 140th Street, was just getting under way after dark last evening when the men and women sauntering up and down were startled to hear a cry for help rise from the water, apparently some distance off shore. This cry was repeated by others, as though several persons were in distress. The club members and their guests flocked to the water's edge and went out on the pier, but it seemed impossible to tell from what direction the sound came, and it was dark beyond all hope of seeing anything.

They were all straining their eyes and debating as to what was best to do when suddenly the capricious searchlight that sweeps the river from Palisades Park was turned in the direction of the club, lighting up all the water in front. They could plainly see some men struggling in the water about sixty feet from the river's edge.

Commodore Hilliger put out in the steam yacht Comfort and Capt. Pratt went out in another boat. Between them they pulled out of the water three young men who had gone down when their dory struck a submerged log. Two of them—John Hagan of 454 East 141st Street and Gustave Basis of 530 East [illegible] Street—were good swimmers, but William Boland of 100 Lawrence Street was helpless in the water. The two tried to keep him afloat, and all three were exhausted when help came. Dr. M. J. Baker, Vice Commodore of the Colonial, put [illegible]

Gillespie Finds Abroad the Balance of $13,000,000 for 55-story Woolworth Building.

GOT MOST OF IT IN FRANCE

Cost of Land Is Put at $5,000,000, Foundation $1,000,000, and Building, 750 Feet High, $7,000,000.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, Aug. 1.—Robert McMaster Gillespie, who has been here for some time, told THE NEW YORK TIMES correspondent this afternoon that he had just completed the financing of the new skyscraper, the Woolworth Building, in New York City.

"For the whole undertaking," said Mr. Gillespie, "we wanted $13,000,000, $5,000,000 for land, $1,000,000 for the foundation and $7,000,000 for the building. Mr. Woolworth supplied $5,000,000.

"Together with Otto Markiewicz of Berlin, I set about a while ago to find the balance in Europe, and have now raised something like $8,000,000, secured as a first mortgage on the building.

"Although it was difficult to raise money in France at this time, I must say I found it fairly easy to obtain the necessary capital for this building, and it is France that supplied most of the $8,000,000."

Mr. Gillespie sails on La Lorraine on Aug. 5.

The Woolworth Building, when completed, will be the tallest office structure in the world. It will contain fifty-five stories, and from the sidewalk to the top of the Gothic tower the height will be 750 feet. The development of the skyscraper has been called the characteristic feature of New York architecture, and in this respect the Woolworth Building will be the most notable and conspicuous example. How long it will retain the distinction of being the tallest office building in the world is problematical, as a loftier structure may be projected within the next few years, and, indeed, the possibility of a one-hundred-story building for New York City was recently mentioned as not at all unlikely in the near future.

In view, however, of the difficulty in acquiring a satisfactory plot for any unusually large structure, the enormous cost and engineering problems to be met, as well as the necessity of placing such a skyscraper on a fairly remunerative paying basis, it seems safe to predict that the Woolworth Building will not be exceeded for many years at least.

The building will occupy the entire Broadway front on the west side between Barclay Street and Park Place, or 152.1 feet on Broadway, 192.6 feet on Barclay Street, and 197.10 feet on Park Place, altogether an area of about 39,500 square feet. Frank W. Woolworth, the owner and proprietor of the chain of five and ten cent stores bearing his name, paid, it is estimated, $4,500,000 for the land. It took eight months to assemble the plot, the first plot bought being the old Mercantile Bank and adjoining buildings on the Park Place corner, while the Barclay Street corner, bought from the Hamilton estate, was the final purchase.

To get a suitable foundation for the structure it has been necessary to go down to bedrock, from 110 to 130 feet below the surface. The caissons being sunk for the foundations are among the largest ever made for building operations, some of the caissons being 19 feet in diameter. Most of this work is now finished, and actual construction of the building will begin in a short time.

Cass Gilbert, the architect, has designed the structure in the Gothic style, and it is planned to meet the practical needs of an American office building.

The building proper will be 29 stories in height, with two stories in the gables on the north and south fronts. From the centre, facing Broadway, will rise the tower, 26 stories high, and nearly square in dimensions, being 86 by 84 feet. This will be the predominating feature of the mammoth structure. A powerful electric light will be placed on the pinnacle.

A luncheon club, with a gymnasium, is to be established in one of the upper floors, and in the basement, connected with the barber shop, will be a large swimming pool.

The plans call for the completion of the Woolworth Building by the Fall of 1912.

FOOTBALL PASSES AS PRIZES.

Plan of Captain of Yale Eleven to Encourage Scholarship in Schools.

Special to The New York Times.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Aug. 1.—To stimulate scholarship in the public schools of New Haven the Yale Football Association has decided to offer free passes to the Yale football games to the students who stand highest in the grammar and high school grades. The idea was conceived by Capt. Arthur Howe of the Yale football eleven, who is one of the best scholars of the senior class at Yale. Manager Kirk Kaynor of the football eleven will soon confer with the Superintendent of Schools here upon the details of the scheme.

Capt. Howe believes that it is needless to try to stimulate interest in football, but highly desirable to strengthen interest in scholarship, and no easier means to do it seems available than through football. The New Haven Board of Education last Winter deliberated for several months a motion to abolish football, but finally decided to let it remain for the present.

NEW ROCHELLE, N. Y., Aug. 1.—Mrs. Emma Schultz, matron at the free baths at Hudson Park, rescued to-day two little children who had fallen out of a rowboat into deep water. The children, Abraham, five years old, and Rose Silensky, aged three, of Webster Avenue were sitting in a rowboat paddling when they fell into the water.

Mrs. Schultz, who was in a street gown, plunged into the water, and swam fifty yards before she could reach the children, whom she seized by the hair as they came to the surface. Then she kept herself afloat by holding on to the rowboat until help came. Coroner James H. Bray, who was swimming at the New [illegible] Club, resuscitated the [illegible]

POPE GAINING STRENGTH.

His Weakness Due Chiefly to Heat—Doctors Expect Early Recovery.

ROME, Aug. 1.—The condition of Pope Pius, although not quite normal, is not alarming in the slightest degree. The weakness following the last indisposition of his Holiness has been due chiefly to the exceptional heat, which, although it has not reached as high a degree as in the other capitals of Europe, is prostrating.

The doctors assure Pope Pius that he is now on the way to complete recovery and have advised him to continue the rest they have ordered only with the desire to insure the success of their treatment. They believe that within a short time his Holiness will be able to resume the ordinary routine of his life. They say that he is getting stronger every day.

Toy Balloon Filled with Citronella Annihilates Them.

Special to The New York Times.

TARRYTOWN, N. Y., Aug. 1.—George P. Fox of Elmsford, an Assessor for the town of Greenburg, is a man of original ideas. Elmsford, like Jersey, has its quota of mosquitos, and sleep in the Fox home has been almost impossible. Yesterday Fox took his family to Rye Beach, and while there bought the children some toy balloons.

When he arrived home he poured a quantity of citronella in one of the balloons, blew it up, and placed it on a pillow. Then he darkened the room. It wasn't long before the mosquitos discovered the balloon and began boring. A few minutes later Fox heard the balloon explode with a bang. He waited to give his scheme time to work, and then went into the room. The mosquitos were all dead.

In telling of the success of the experiment to-day, Fox said: "Those mosquitos that weren't killed by the explosion went so fast to get away from the odor that they simply died from exhaustion. No mosquitos bothered us after that."

CARNEGIE PENSIONS TOTH.

Man Who Served Twenty Years for Crime He Did Not Commit.

PITTSBURG, Aug. 1.—Andy Toth, who was released from the penitentiary here last March, after serving twenty years of a life term for a crime he did not commit, has been placed on the private pension roll of Andrew Carnegie.

Toth was convicted for a share in the killing of a watchman at Carnegie's Edgar Thomson steel plant at Braddock, Penn., but the confession of one of the rioters in Hungary cleared him of all responsibility, and he was pardoned. Mr. Carnegie gave the man a pension of $40 a month. Toth will leave here for Hungary, where he will rejoin his wife, whom he has not seen since his conviction.

SHARKS AT LONG BEACH.

Bathers and Small Fishes Scarce, but a Crowd Is Interested.

Special to The New York Times.

LONG BEACH, N. Y., Aug. 1.—Two sharks which made their way to-day into Reynolds Channel from the ocean drew a crowd to the bulkhead. The fish, which were six feet long, disported themselves in the basin for nearly an hour. Occasionally they jumped clear of the water, descending with great splashes.

Their presence caused an immediate loss of interest among bathers, and to it was attributed the scarcity of weakfish, fluke, and small bluefish for the past day or so.

FISHKILL-ON-HUDSON, Aug. 1.—Lincoln Beachy in a Curtiss biplane starting from the Newburg Driving Park this afternoon crossed the Hudson River and circled Snake Hill, one of the tall peaks that form a part of the Hudson River mountain range on the west bank of the river. He ascended to a height of nearly a mile and an eighth, and made a number of graceful plunges, cut figure eights, and performed other feats.

His first flight lasted eleven minutes, the second twenty-two. On his second flight he raced with a 90 horse power automobile driven by Joe Judge. Beachy circled the track as easily as the machine and won the race by nearly a mile.

It is said that Miss Parrish is to receive several thousand dollars for her brain, and the money is being paid to her in installments. Miss Parrish has a strong memory. She can read a chapter of ordinary length from a volume and after the one reading can repeat the chapter.

COL. ASTOR TO WED MADELEINE FORCE

Father of 18-Year-Old Debutante in Society Announces the Engagement.

MET JUST A YEAR AGO

Col. Astor's Marked Attentions Soon Gave Rise to Rumors of Betrothal—Wedding Plans Not Yet Made.

Formal announcement was made yesterday of the engagement of Miss Madeleine Talmage Force, the débutante daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William H. Force of 18 East Thirty-seventh Street, to Col. John Jacob Astor, grandson of John Jacob Astor, and the recognised head of the Astor family in this country. The announcement was made by Mr. Force after many months of vague rumors that an engagement did exist between Col. Astor and his eighteen-year-old daughter, who have been seen together at numerous social affairs ever since their first meeting, in Bar Harbor, last Summer. Col. Astor is 47 years old.

In making the announcement at his office at 78 Front Street, the father of the bride-to-be said that owing to the continued rumors of the attachment between Col. Astor and his daughter, which were not backed up by any public announcement of an engagement, he feared that unpleasant gossip might arise.

"Therefore I insisted on manking the formal announcement," Mr. Force continued. "I called Col. Astor on the telephone to-day and we discussed the matter. He accepted my point of view and it was agreed between us that I should make the announcement. No date has been set yet for the wedding. All that will come later on."

Col. Astor came here from Newport on Monday on his new yacht Noma, which is now lying at the station of the New York Yacht Club at the foot of East Twenty-third Street. His son Vincent is at Beechwood, his father's house at Newport, where many of the cottagers received the news of the engagement yesterday from Col. Astor. It is said at Newport that Mr. and Mrs. Force and their daughters, the Misses Katherine and Madeleine Force, are soon to visit Col. Astor at Beechwood. Last night the Colonel entertained them at dinner.

Miss Force a Debutante.

Miss Madeleine Force was introduced to society on Dec. 22 last and was graduated from Miss Spence's school in this city in June of last year. She had previously studied in Europe and also at Miss Ely's school at Greenwich, Conn. She is the second daughter of Mr. Force. Miss Katherine Force, her sister, is not yet 20 years old.

The future Mrs. Astor is a rather tall, graceful girl with brown hair and strong, clean-cut features. She is very popular in the younger set and took part last season in many of the society amateur theatricals. She belongs to the Junior League, an organization for débutantes, and among her girl friends are the Misses Leta Pell Wright, Margaret Mackay, Henrietta Thaw, Alice Damrosch, Dorothy Cramp, Carol Brown, Sara McAlpin Pyle, and Nathalie Kelley.

Col. Astor has been very attentive to Miss Force ever since their first meeting at Bar Harbor, where the young girl's family were spending the Summer. They were seen together at nearly all of the social functions of last season, and society fully expected to hear the formal announcement of their engagement at the large dinner dance which Col. Astor gave at his town house, 840 Fifth Avenue, on Feb. 6. For several months previous to this, Col. Astor and his son had been abroad. During their absence and later in the season, the Astor box at the Metropolitan Opera House, No. 7 in the "golden horseshoe," was frequently occupied by Mrs. Force and her two daughers. At various times during the season the Colonel entertained the family at dinner at the fashionable restaurants.

He was abroad during part of May and June, and, returning to this side, went to his estate at Rhinebeck-on-Hudson. During the boat races at Poughkeepsie in July he entertained Mrs. Force and her younger daughter at luncheon. For a brief period Mr. and Mrs. Force were at Bar Harbor, but they have not closed their house in East Thirty-seventh Street, as have the majority of their neighbors.

Miss Force's mother was Miss Katherine E. Talmage, daughter of T. V. P. Talmage, and a granddaughter of ex-Mayor Talmage of Brooklyn. She was married to Mr. Force in January, 1889. The family is well known in Brooklyn, where they lived on Remsen Street prior to coming to Manhattan. Mr. Force, who was born on May 11, 1852, is now the head of the extensive shipping and forwarding firm of William H. Force & Co., with offices at 78 Front Street. He is a prominent driver and cross-country rider, and is a member of the Riding and Driving and Hamilton Clubs of Brooklyn; also the New York Yacht and the Down Town Clubs.

Col. Astor's Career.

Col. Astor has held a prominent place in the life of this city for many years. Not alone has he been a conspicuous clubman and leader of society, but he has engaged in vast business activities that gave him a place of rank, apart from his immense fortune and social attainments. He has put up and owns more hotels and skyscrapers than any other New Yorker. His fortune is estimated at over $100,000,000.

He was born at Ferncliff, Rhinebeck-on-the-Hudson, July 13, 1864. His school days were passed at St. Paul's, Concord, N. H., and he was graduated from Harvard, class of '88. After an extended tour of Europe and of the West Indies, he became a student of the business details connected with the vast estate, which, on the death of his father, William Astor, came under his direction. He has always been an enthusiastic yachtsman, was one of the earliest believers in the automobile, and has recently displayed a [illegible] interest in air navigation.

In 1891, three years after leaving Harvard, Col. Astor married Miss Ava Willing, daughter of Edward S. Willing of Philadelphia, who obtained a divorce from him in November, 1909. Col. Astor first received his title through appointment to the staff of Gov. Morton, but later received the commission of Colonel in the Spanish-American war. Col. Astor's bent of mind has been toward mechanics and general scientific research. Several patents for useful inventions have been issued to him. He has also published several books. His first, "A Journey in Other Worlds," was published in 1894. He belongs to more than forty clubs, including the Knickerbocker, Union, Metropolitan, New York Yacht, Brook, Riding, Tuxedo, Country, Racquet and Tennis, Automobile Club of America, Army and Navy, Military Order of Foreign Wars, and Society of Colonial Wars.

When the Spanish-American war broke out Col. Astor had just returned from a cruise in his yacht to Cuba and was in Washington when the declaration of war was made. He went at once to the War Department and offered his service in any capacity.

The Astor battery which he equipped for the United States forces cost $100,000. The battery did effective work at Santiago, and later in the Philippines.

When the Colonel received his discharge from the army, in September, 1898, Major General Shafter recommended to the Secretary of War that the young officer be advanced to the brevet rank of Colonel "for faithful and meritorious service." This rank was therefore conferred on him.

At the death of Mrs. William Astor, the Colonel's mother, who lived in one of the big twin houses at Fifth Avenue and Sixty-fifth Street, the leadership of New York society fell upon Col. Astor's wife. The divorce proceedings instituted by Mrs. Astor in 1909 were shrouded in much mystery. The interlocutory decree was filed on Nov. 10 of that year in the office of the Dutchess County Clerk, at Poughkeepsie. The papers were sealed. The decree was signed by Supreme Court Justice Isaac N. Mills of Mount Vernon.

At the time the interlocutory decree was granted in November, Col. Astor and his son Vincent, were cruising in Southern waters in the Nourmahal. A great gale swept over the West Indies, and for a time it was believed that the yacht had foundered and all on board had perished. At the height of the excitement the Nourmahal came into the harbor at San Juan, Porto Rico, unharmed.

Wedding May Be Out of Town.

The wedding of Col. Astor and Miss Force will be a very quiet one, it is said, and will probably take place late in the Fall out of town. Besides his magnificent home on Fifth Avenue, which has been recently remodeled, and which is architecturally a chateau of the time of François I., the couple will occupy Beechwood, at Newport, during the season and spend the early Spring and late Fall at the Colonel's country seat at Rhinebeck, which is called Ferncliff, being a house of great architectural beauty, set down in the centre of 2,000 acres of woodland and meadows.

The original Astor came here from Baden, when the new city was a century old, with a capital of $75, and from the hour of landing to his last illness never ceased to work. He learned the languages of the Senecas, Mohawks, and Oneidas, and within ten years he had a regiment of men trapping for him. He married Sarah Todd, who brought him a dowry of $300. Meanwhile he was buying real estate on Manhattan Island. From his investments grew the tremendous fortune that Col. John Jacob Astor found waiting for him when he finished his college days.

CUBAN UPRISING IS LAID TO GRAFT

Gen. Acevedo Leads a Revolt, Charging Gomez Administration with Wholesale Corruption.

ISSUES HEATED MANIFESTO

Conservatives Said to Have Instigated Him to Impress Stimson with the Country's Disgust.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

HAVANA, Aug. 1.—Gen. Acevedo, a veteran of the war of 1895, and who headed an uprising a year ago, has again taken up arms against the Government as a protest against alleged administration graft.

While the Government declares that Gen. Acevedo has only five men, rumor says he has fifty, and is en route for Matanzas, where a big contingent is ready to join forces with him. It is also rumored that there is an uprising in the Province of Pinar del Rio.

Acevedo is a man of little prestige and small following, but El Dia, whose anti-graft campaign has already forced the resignation of two Cabinet Ministers, and has greatly stirred the country and Government, says the Conservatives instigated Acevedo in order to impress Mr. Stimson with the country's disgust at the barefaced graft whereby rulers have suddenly grown rich.

The Conservatives, on the other hand, declare that Government secret agents treacherously instigated Acevedo in order that the Government may declare martial law, under which it would be enabled to suppress the newspaper El Dia, which otherwise would be impossible.

El Dia, which was started by a representative of Armand Andre because the Conservative Party refused to indorse his motion in the House to impeach President Gomez, does not desire a revolution, fearing American intervention and loss of Cuban independence. For this reason El Dia dropped its campaign against Monteagudo, commanding the armed forces, as its accusations against him had caused soldiers in the eastern provinces to become insubordinate and to refuse to obey orders. These soldiers with their officers constituted the most loyal part of the army. Were Gen. Monocal or any other big man to espouse the Acevedo revolt that part of the army would immediately join it.

Acevedo on starting out scattered a printed manifesto, saying:

> To the people and for the people: The constant robberies and pillage of the Gomez Administration force us to take arms against its rotten government and its still more rotten administration, which has trampled down people and destroyed our national honor, which cost so many lives and sacrifices to obtain.
> All Cubans, whether civilians or military who feel any love for their homes and country, are offended, and we count upon their aid.
> We give the Government fifteen days to relinquish its authority. If the Government fails to do this we shall reduce all the territory of the republic to ashes, appealing to methods of warfare. We pray that all corporations shall fail to give transportation to the military, under penalty of suffering the same penalties.

STEAMER UPSETS, 7 DROWN.

Passengers Thrown Into the St. Lawrence as Sirus Strikes a Rock.

MASSENA, N. Y., Aug. 1.—Seven persons were drowned late this afternoon in the St. Lawrence River when the ferry steamer Sirus struck a shoal eight miles below this city and capsized. The 75 passengers were thrown into the water. Four bodies have been recovered. Three are those of women. The four dead, whose bodies were recovered, are:

DEWEY, ADA, of Massena.
HACKETT, FLOYD, of Massena.
PARKER, HATTIE, of Ogdensburg.
PARKER, NELLIE, of Ogdensburg, sister of Hattie Parker.

The identity of three persons who, according to the Captain's tally are missing, is not known. Scores of persons in motor boats and skiffs are endeavoring to find the bodies.

The steamer Sirus left the dock here this morning for Cornwall, on the Canadian side, with seventy-five persons bound for a day's outing there. Most of those aboard were residents of Ogdensburg and Massena. The picnic crowd boarded the Sirus on the return trip about 4 o'clock this afternoon and were seated on deck under the canvas awning when the steamer grounded and lurched.

The deck was swept bare in a moment, the entire party being hurled into the river when the boat tipped over, and all were struggling for life in the swift waters. Women who could not swim clutched at camp stools and other floating articles, while others upheld and aided by male companions battled their way against the current to the overturned steamer.

Picnickers at the International Park, just opposite the scene of the wreck, manned every motor boat and skiff available and aided in the work of rescue. They picked off scores who were clinging to the sides of the ferryboat.

Seven of the passengers, benumbed and exhausted, were swept down stream to death. Among them were the Misses Parker, who were spending their vacation in Massena. Futile attempts were made to save Miss Dewey and Floyd Hackett from the current. So quickly did the river claim its victims that those who were drowned had already met their death when boats from the International Park reached the scene, hardly five minutes after the crash. Those rescued were taken to the International Park and later proceeded to this city.

The Sirus lies to-night near midstream, capsized. The vessel was formerly a private yacht, and saw service at the Thousand Islands.

NEED NEW SUPPLY BILL.

Governor's Veto of $220,000 Omnibus Item May Mean That.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, N. Y., Aug. 1.—It is altogether likely that when the Legislature reassembles it will pass a supplemental supply bill. This will be necessary by reason of the veto of the $220,000 omnibus item in the annual supply bill which Gov. Dix disapproved because there was no way of separating the various items into which it was to be divided, including reimbursements and counsel fees for the Allds-Conger investigation by the Senate. Other sums were $25,000 for the committee of the Senate ordered appointed by joint resolution to investigate the affairs of Albany, and $10,000 for investigating the affairs of the defunct Union Bank of Brooklyn by Bank Superintendent Van Tuyl.

At the State Controller's office it is learned that there is but $2,000 of the contingent fund remaining. On Oct. 1 there will be available $60,000 contingent fund money, which is provided for in the general appropriation bill signed by the Governor.

NAMES STATE FOOD BOARD.

W. C. Osborn and President Brown Among Governor's Appointees.

ALBANY, N. Y., Aug. 1.—Gov. Dix has appointed the following as members of the New York Food Investigating Committee: William Church Osborn, counsel to the Governor; Senator James H. O'Brien of Brooklyn, William C. Brown, President of the New York Central and Hudson River Railroad Company; Gilbert M. Tucker of Albany, and William C. Barry of Rochester.

The other members of the commission are State Commissioner of Agriculture Pearson, State Health Commissioner Porter, Chairman Stevens of the Up-State Public Service Commission, Dean Bailey, Director of the State College of Agriculture at Cornell; Whitman H. Jordan, Director of the New York State Agricultural Experiment Station at Geneva, and Frank N. Godfrey, Master of the New York State Grange.

The commission is authorized by a legislative act to inquire into the purity, prices, production, distribution, and consumption of food stuffs and farm and dairy products, and is to recommend remedial legislation to the Legislature next year. The members are to serve without compensation.

Carriage Builder's Wealth to Charities.

The body of John Curley, the wealthy carriage manufacturer of Brooklyn who died on Sunday in Bad Gastein, Austria, will be brought here for burial in the Holy Cross Cemetery, Brooklyn. While his will has not yet been filed friends say that most of his fortune has been donated to charitable institutions [illegible].

EIGHT MANIACS DIE IN BLAZING ASYLUM

Building on Hilltop Outside Hamilton, Ont., Catches Fire as Its 800 Inmates Slept.

SOME LEAP INTO THE FLAMES

Firemen Struggle with Frenzied Men, Who Are Only Saved by Being Knocked Senseless.

HAMILTON, Ont., Aug. 1.—Eight lives were lost in a fire which partly destroyed one of the main buildings of the insane asylum on the side of the mountain southwest of this city early to-day. There were 800 sleeping patients in the building when the fire was discovered, and it was only a well-trained fire-fighting corps and coolness and bravery among the nurses and attendants under Dr. English that averted a more serious loss of life.

There are four buildings in the group within the asylum grounds. The main building, where the fire occurred, is a four-story brick structure with a basement, 200 feet in length and about 70 feet wide, with wings at either end. The women patients, numbering some 350, occupied quarters in the west wing. The rest of the building was taken up with men's wards, and contained some of the most desperate cases in the asylum.

The women were moved without serious difficulty and housed in the adjoining buildings. The situation among the men was more serious. The fire started on the fourth floor, in what is known as Section D, where the most violently insane are kept. The bulk of the men, guarded by attendants, moved down three flights of stairs out of the fire zone in orderly procession, but about a score, driven into a frenzy by the stifling smoke and the excitement of a midnight fire, fought off their rescuers with desperate fury. Three of them, after being carried down to the second floor, broke away, and fled back to the blazing corridors.

The fire in the meantime had spread down the hallway and was eating its way through the floor to the third story. The asylum brigade, although fighting bravely, was handicapped by the maniacs and was losing control.

The city brigade, which had been summoned, was then toiling up the almost precipitous roadway leading to the asylum grounds. It was nearly 2 o'clock before the first of their apparatus was brought into play. The firemen ran scaling ladders up to the third and fourth floor windows, where it was believed some of the unfortunates had fled. They found it difficult work to break down the iron gratings on the windows, and the fire in the meantime was growing fiercer every minute. Crawling into the stifling smoke, the firemen groped their way about until they found a maniac. If he was unconscious from smoke the task was easy, but if he was still able to offer resistance he was knocked senseless and dropped into the life nets below. Eight of the insane and one attendant who had lost consciousness in the work of rescue were saved in this way.

The combined fire forces had the situation well in hand by 3:30 A. M. The two upper floors and the roof of the east wing were burned and the lower floors were flooded with water. As the firemen worked their way into the burned section some bodies were found. Three were taken out of the hallway on the top floor. It was found that one helpless paralytic was burned to death in his cell. Four more were found huddled together in a small room, burned to a crisp.

The blazing roof of the asylum perched up on the mountainside attracted the attention of the entire city. The cry, "The asylum is on fire!" rang through the streets, and hundreds flocked up the hill. It was a weird sight that presented itself. The hysterical screams of the 200 inmates of the four buildings drowned every other sound. The firemen, fighting both the flames and the maniacs, were in constant peril, and frequently were seen perched on window sills through which the smoke was pouring in dense columns trying to drag forth a struggling man. One maniac broke from the grasp of a fireman at a window and fled back into the flames, where he perished.

A searching investigation has been ordered. The fire is believed to have been caused by a short circuit on an electric wire in the storeroom on the top floor.

COMMITTEEMEN AT ODDS

Republicans Object to Wilson's Interview Appeasing Manufacturers—Secretary Approved Dr. Rusby's Salary.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 1.—The Moss committee launched its investigation of the Wiley case to-day and got into a partisan controversy almost at the outset. There was a large attendance, and the number of seats were out of proportion to those who wanted them. Attorney General Wickersham, who had been subpoenaed, appeared to ask to be excused for the present until he had time to consult papers on file in his department. Dr. Ira Remsen was there and sat attentively listening to the proceedings of the morning. He will be the principal witness to-morrow. He said to-day that he has no idea what line the examination will take, but he desires to make public all that any one may seek to know of the work of the so-called Remsen Board.

Mr. Zappone, the disbursing officer of the Department of Agriculture, was interrogated on the methods of keeping the accounts of expert employes of the department. It was brought out that the Remsen Board was paid in precisely the same way that Dr. Wiley and his associates arranged to pay Dr. Rusby, which is the bone of contention over which the whole controversy arose.

Mr. Zappone said, however, that the law which Dr. Wiley is accused of violating, which prohibits the payment of more than $9 per day to any scientist in the service within Washington, does not apply to the experts called by the Government in court cases. Many of these, he said, got more than $50 a day. In one case he approved a claim of $1,000 for fees and expenses of one scientist at a trial covering a week or more.

These large fees are paid by contract, the accounting officer testified. The charge against Dr. Wiley is that he employed Dr. Rusby at a sum exceeding the legal limit of $9 per day, but disguised the fact by putting Dr. Rusby upon the salary rolls at $1,600 a year. Mr. Zappone said he had held up the recent payment to Dr. Rusby at the written order of Secretary Wilson.

The committee divided sharply on partisan lines when Mr. Moss placed Mr. Willis, the Washington correspondent of The New York Journal of Commerce, on the stand and showed by him that Secretary Wilson had said that the Remsen Referee Board had been appointed in the interest of the manufacturers.

Quotes Secretary Wilson.

Mr. Moss did not put Mr. Willis's article in the record, but simply asked him if he wrote the dispatch in which appeared the statement quoted from the Secretary's remarks at a hearing for the saccharin manufacturers last May. Here is part of the dispatch:

> The Secretary said: "I want you to understand that the Referee Board was organized and put in action for the purpose of conserving the interests of the manufacturers."

Mr. Willis said he wrote shorthand, but did not remember whether he took the remark down in shorthand or not, but he was certain that he wrote it down at the time. He said he asked three gentlemen present if they heard the remark, because he desired to be accurate in his report of the hearing and the Secretary's statement. Mr. Higgins of Connecticut objected to the testimony.

"I think," he said, with some show of feeling, "that to prove that by the statement of a newspaper man is not only improper; it is indecent."

This caused a stir, and there was an outpouring of opinion all around the table. Mr. Floyd of Arkansas explained that Chairman Moss was not a lawyer "like some of the rest of us," and he had not handled the matter quite as lawyers would.

All the Republicn members of the committee—Mr. Higgins, Mr. French, and Mr. Sloan—then got busy and cross-examined Mr. Willis, who made a clear and clean-cut statement, which, a moment later, was corroborated by Mr. Earl, the Solicitor of the Department of Commerce and Labor, who was present at the hearing, and remembered that Mr. Willis had asked him if he understood Secretary Wilson to say what Mr. Willis had thought he heard the Secretary say.

Mr. Earl said he replied yes to Mr. Willis's question, and then went on down the corridor, wondering what Mr. Willis wanted to ask him about it for, and then he went to Mr. Willis and said that he did not think the Secretary intended what would be inferred from the words he had used. A good deal of effort was expended to make Mr. Earl put Mr. Willis in a contradictory light, but in the main the two witnesses agreed as to the actual words used by Secretary Wilson, and the matter rested there. The committee will call the department officials present at the hearing, and the stenographer who took down what was said.

The remark by the Secretary is of interest because in the documentary evidence laid before the committee he gives two explanations why the Remsen Referee Board was established.

What Wilson Wrote.

In a statement accompanying the documents sent to the Moss committee, Secretary Wilson, under the heading, "Reasons for Organizing the Board," says:

> The Referee Board was organized to assist the Secretary of Agriculture in determining the wholesomeness or the deleterious character of such foods, or of such articles used in foods, as he might refer to them for consideration and report. The collection and examination of samples are made by the Bureau of Chemistry, but the enforcement of the law is with the Secretary of Agriculture, and as it is necessary for him to know definitely whether certain articles are deleterious or not and whether there is grave conflict of scientific opinion on the question, he refers the subject to this board.

In a letter on Jan. 13, 1909, to Charles F. Scott, Chairman of the House Committee on Agriculture, Mr. Wilson said:

> The Referee Board was appointed because certain large manufacturers of foodstuffs asked thorough investigation by the most distinguished scientists in the land. They asked the President to select a number of disinterested scientific men competent to pass upon the question and stated that if these men found sulphur dioxide, saccharin, and benzoate of soda were harmful, they would, of course, immediately discontinue their use. The President corresponded with the Presidents of a number of the leading universities of the country, who suggested certain names to him from which he made the selection of the five men I have heretofore named, and these men were appointed by me and organized into a board as stated.

The correspondence that is now before the committee clears up many points in the [illegible] of Dr. Rusby's pay for expert service. It appears that when Dr. Wiley learned to what lengths the proceedings to oust him from the department had proceeded, he wrote to Assistant Secretary Hays, President of the Personnel Board, asking him for a copy of the charges which he says he thought were mentioned at the hearing before the board. Mr. Hays on April 24 replied to Dr. Wiley, saying there were no charges—that the matter had not been presented to the Personnel Board in the form of charges, and states:

> Under date of March 28 Dr. F. L. Dunlap, as Acting Chief of the Bureau of Chemistry, transmitted a memorandum to the Secretary with certain exhibits in regard to the matter referred to. This memorandum and papers were referred by the Secretary to the Committee of Personnel for investigation and report.

Thus it appears that Secretary Wilson himself is responsible for the initiative of the effort to get Dr. Wiley out of the department.

In the memorandum by Dr. Dunlap referred to the following statement occurs which puts upon Secretary Wilson the responsibility for approving the arrangement for paying Dr. Rusby's appointment at $1,600 per annum. It is dated Feb. 16, 1911, and says:

> This appointment was based on a recommendation which I inclose as an exhibit. The recommendation is unsigned by the Chief, although approved by you, (Secretary Wilson.) Mr. Linton, our chief clerk, tells me that Dr. Wiley gave this to you (Secretary Wilson) in person, unsigned by him, and that you (Secretary Wilson) signed it over the word "Chief," which signature has apparently been erased. It has been, however, approved by you (Secretary Wilson) and was returned to the Bureau of Chemistry for the Chief's signature.

There have thus far in the division been no evidences of the proximity of tainted money and no charges of any one whosoever having received any.

REAPPORTIONMENT SURE.

Senator Penrose Sees Republican Advantage in House Bill.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 1.—Senator Penrose said to-day that the Reapportionment bill, to be voted upon Thursday, would pass the Senate without serious, if any, amendment. This bill increases the membership of the House from 391 to 433, and the apportionment of twenty-one States will remain as at present, while twenty-five States will have gains, notably New York, 6; Pennsylvania, 4, and New Jersey, 2 members.

There is opposition to the bill in the Senate from two different motives. Senator La Follette, who presented the minority report, is opposed to it because the gains in the Electoral College and in the National Convention would work against the insurgents, as the States controlled by them will make less than one-third of the total gains in Republican States.

Senator Root of New York and Senator Burton of Ohio are opposed to the bill on the ground that a reapportionment now would be to the advantage of the Democrats, as the Legislatures of their States are Democratic and the reapportionment would be so manipulated as to strengthen the Democratic Party.

Senator Penrose said that the National Conventions would be increased by eighty-four members and the Electoral College by forty-two if the Reapportionment bill becomes a law. In Pennsylvania there will be twelve delegates to the National Convention elected at large.

"The increase in the membership of the House will be forty-two, plus two more in case both Arizona and New Mexico are admitted to Statehood," said Mr. Penrose. "Of this number thirty-two will come from States which in 1908 were carried by the Republicans, ten from States which in 1908 were carried by the Democrats, and one each from Arizona and New Mexico. Assuming that the States carried by the two great parties in 1908 are not variable quantities, the Republican Party will gain thirty-two Electoral votes and the Democratic Party will gain ten, as follows:

REPUBLICAN.		DEMOCRATIC.
California	3	Alabama	1
Idaho	1	Colorado	1
Illinois	1	Florida	1
Massachusetts	2	Georgia	1
Michigan	1	Louisiana	1
Minnesota	1	Oklahoma	3
Montana	1	Texas	2
New Jersey	2	Total	10
New York	6
North Dakota	1
Ohio	1
Oregon	1
Pennsylvania	4
Rhode Island	1
South Dakota	1
Utah	1
West Virginia	1
Washington	2
Total	32

"In the event Arizona and New Mexico are admitted to Statehood the House membership will be increased by forty-four members, one member from each new State, and the electoral vote will be increased by six. Arizona was carried by the Democrats in 1908, and New Mexico by the Republicans."

CRITICISES STEEL INDUSTRY.

Employes Worked Seven Days a Week, Secretary Nagel Finds.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 1.—Secretary Nagel of the Department of Commerce and Labor to-day in a special report to the Senate, on conditions of employment in the iron and steel industry in the United States, stated that "out of over 90,000 employes covered in the report the customary working week of one-third of them was a seven-day week, Sunday not differing from other days, and approximately one-fourth of the 90,000 worked eighty-four hours or over per week, which, in effect, means a twelve-hour day every day in the week, including Sunday."

Secretary Nagel's report was the result of a special investigation made in response to a resolution of Senator Borah. It covers practically all the iron and steel plants of the United States, numbering 344.

The seven-day working week is not confined to the blast furnace department, where there is a metallurgical necessity for continuous operation, says the report, but also was found to a considerable extent in other departments, for commercial reasons only.

Much of the Sunday work is no more necessary than in other industries, says the report, in pointing out that in other industries where continuous operation is necessary entirely practicable systems have been found by which one day of rest out of seven can be given to each employe.

Nearly 60 per cent. of the employes are foreign born, and nearly two-thirds of these are of the Slavic race. Almost half of the 90,000 employes receive less than 18 cents an hour, one-quarter under 25 cents an hour, and the other one-fourth 25 cents and over an hour. A few very highly skilled employes, however, receive $1.25 an hour. Those receiving 50 cents and over an hour number less than one-twentieth.

PASS FREE LIST BILL IN SENATE, 48 TO 30

House Measure Lost, but Kern's Substitute Restricting Meats Goes Through.

TAFT SURE TO VETO IT

Also the Wool Bill Which Underwood Agrees to Send to Conference—May Adjourn by Aug. 10.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 1.—The Senate to-day, after balloting steadily for nearly two hours, passed the Farmers' Free List bill by a vote of 48 to 30 in substantially the form in which it came from the House. But for the solitary desertion of Senator Bailey of Texas, who is entirely at outs with his party on the tariff question, the House bill would have passed without a word being changed. As it was, the House draft went out on a tie vote, 39 to 39, and in order to attract enough insurgent support to put the bill through the Democrats had to permit Senator Kern of Indiana to present his amendment, outlined in these dispatches last night, making importations of meat and flour products free only from countries with which we have reciprocity treaties and which admit free of duty from the United States cotton, corn, wheat, oats, horses, cattle, and hogs.

The adoption of the Kern amendment after a host of other proposed changes had been voted down opened the way to other modifications and several were adopted. On motion of Senator Shively, an Indiana Democrat, binders were put on the free list along with other agricultural implements. On motion of Senator Gronna of North Dakota cement and lime were added to the free list, and the restriction limiting the free listing of boots and shoes only to those made chiefly from cattle skins was dropped.

None of these amendments is expected to cause friction with the House, and a conference is expected to agree on the bill quickly and send it soon to the President. He will veto it at once, just as he will the Wool bill, which is expected to reach him toward the end of this week.

No doubt is felt now, but that the free list is the tariff measure the Senate will consider this session. The House to-day on Mr. Underwood's motion voted to send the Wool bill to conference and that means that an understanding with the insurgent Senators has been reached and that a compromise will be agreed on and sent to the President.

Mr. Underwood explained that if the President signs it—as he certainly will not—the House will continue to its work of tariff revision. He intimated plainly that if the President vetoes no motive will remain for a protracted session, and adjournment will speedily be effected. As there is not the least question as to the President's cheerful determination to veto every tariff bill he receives the prediction is freely made to-day that adjournment will not be later than Aug. 10.

The Free List bill, as passed in its amended form, had the support of every Democrat in the Senate. Twelve insurgents came to their assistance, while Mr. McCumber, a regular Republican from North Dakota, whose anger against a protective system that permitted the passage of the Canadian Reciprocity bill has not yet subsided, voted with them. Mr. Borah of Idaho, an insurgent on all things except the tariff, did likewise. Mr. Bourne of Oregon, who considers himself a progressive leader, and who actually is President of the National Progressive Republican League, was the only insurgent to vote against it. Included with the insurgents was Mr. Nelson of Minnesota, an insurgent on the tariff but on nothing else.

Few onlookers at the political game in Washington can recall a series of votes in which all factions were as badly split as they were on the amendments and various motions to-day. The unexpected shifts were indicated in the difficulty the clerks had in recording the votes. Ordinarily all that is needed is for the recording clerk to know that a particular Senator is in the chamber, and he then records him infallibly according to his known affiliations, whether his answer is audible or not. To-day, however, after every roll call corrections had to be made, while laughter among the Senators indicated their surprised amusement at the queer alignments that resulted.

Before the vote that finally passed the amended measure was taken Mr. Lodge of Massachusetts and Jeff Davis of Arkansas—two widely differing types—provided the amusement of the sitting. Mr. Lodge with the sole purpose of embarrassing Southern Democrats offered an amendment putting rice on the free list. It was voted down safely enough, 30 to 45, but to the great delight of the Republicans and the galleries certain Democrats like Mr. Davis and Mr. Martine of New Jersey, who voted for the amendment at first on the general ground that it tended toward cheaper food, became alarmed lest the amendment should prevail and changed their votes from "aye" to "no."

Then Mr. Davis, who before this has been more remarkable for his vociferousness than for his humor, took his revenge on the scholarly New Englander. Solemnly sending up an amendment as a substitute for that just defeated he stood gazing at Mr. Lodge while the clerk read a proposal putting on the free list "Boston baked beans whether cooked or raw and codfish skinned or unskinned whether served in balls or not."

Amid shouts of laughter the amendment was defeated.

The House conferees on the Woolen bill as agreed upon to-day will be Mr. Underwood, Chairman of the Ways and Means Committee, and Representatives Payne of New York and Dalzell of Pennsylvania, Republicans, and Harrison and Randell, Democrats. The Senate conferees will be Mr. Penrose, Chairman of the Finance Committee; Mr. La Follette, the insurgent member, and Mr. Bailey for the Democrats.

Mr. Harrison and Mr. Randell both favored free wool when the bill was under consideration in the House, and their selection by Mr. Underwood is taken to mean that the House will insist on further cuts in the La Follette compromise measure passed by the Senate. Mr. Penrose announced at first that he and no other regular would have anything to do with the bill passed by the Democratic-insurgent coalition, but it is thought that the President finally persuaded him to serve for the sake of formality.

No matter what the nature of the tariff legislation put up to him may be, the President will be ready with a very prompt veto message. The language of this veto message will vary somewhat according as one bill or another is sent to him by the coalition, but the line of argument will be practically the same. The President will call attention to the long and hard fight that was made for the creation of a permanent Tariff Board, and that the regular session of Congress is only four months away, when there will be ample time for the consideration of tariff revision, with the advantage of figures and facts in the report of the board. At the same time he will announce his intention to recommend strongly that such revision be undertaken.

BRYAN ASSAILS UNDERWOOD.

Tainted with Protection, He Says, Because of Delay in Steel Schedule.

Special to The New York Times.

LINCOLN, Neb., Aug. 1.—In The Commoner this week W. J. Bryan will make a violent attack on Chairman Underwood of the House Ways and Means Committee for his stand on the tariff. In part he will say:

> The action of Chairman Underwood in opposing an immediate effort to reduce the iron and steel schedule reveals the real Underwood.
> Some Democrats thought Mr. Bryan did Mr. Underwood an injustice when he said he was tainted with protection. What do those Democrats think now, since Mr. Underwood has put himself at the head of the opposition to Speaker Clark's tariff reduction programme?
> The unmasking of Chairman Underwood will serve a useful purpose if it arouses the Democrats to an understanding of the mistake made in putting Mr. Underwood at the head of the committee, if it solidifies his policy of delay.
> The most effective way to shear him of his power is to change the caucus rule so as to require a public record vote on every question affecting the party's policy.

This is not the first time Mr. Bryan has assailed Mr. Underwood. Once when he did so the House Democrats in caucus ignored Mr. Bryan's advice on tariff questions by unanimously supporting Mr. Underwood's programme.

FOIL JESSE POMEROY IN HOPE OF ESCAPE

Murderer in Thirty-eighth Year of Life Sentence Caught with Jail-Breaking Instrument.

SOUGHT PARDON RECENTLY

Has Several Times Before Made Desperate Attempts to Escape from Charlestown Prison.

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, Aug. 1.—Jesse Pomeroy, solitary life prisoner in the Charlestown State Prison, who has sought executive clemency from every Governor since his incarceration thirty-seven years ago, and who has made several desperate attempts to escape, was found to have a sharpened eight-inch stock bit in his possession when searched last Saturday by an officer of the prison. Warden Bridges had been warned of peculiar actions of the prisoner, and had caused him to be watched closely for some time.

Pomeroy is confined in the Cherry Hill section of the prison, a department originally constructed for incorrigibles, and his cell is protected by a heavy double door. Had he been able to pick the locks and escape from the cell, he would have found himself in a corridor which is always guarded by one of the prison officers.

The latest effort to secure some measure of clemency for Pomeroy was an appeal to Gov. Foss, who announced after an investigation that he would try to arrange matters so that the prisoner would be permitted to do some manual labor and have more exercise. Warden Bridges has always maintained that Pomeroy will not do manual work, although he has been offered the privilege ever since he has been confined in the prison. He worked a few weeks at one time and has since, according to the Warden, consistently refused to do any work. So far as exercise is concerned, it is [illegible] Pomeroy is permitted to exercise in the yard an hour every day.

The prison officials are unable to decide whether the instrument found on Pomeroy was intended as a dagger or a lock pick. It was sharp enough for use as a stiletto. The prisoner refused to say how he obtained it.

Pomeroy was convicted in 1874 of the murder of a boy and girl in South Boston in circumstances of peculiar ferocity and depravity. He had prior to that time come to the attention of the police for maltreating children, and had served a sentence at the Westboro Reform School.

JEWELER SHOT DOWN IN STORE BY A THIEF

Robber, Pursued by a Crowd, Finally Escapes Over a Tenement Roof

FINGER PRINTS ONLY CLUE

David Silverman Found a Youth Robbing His Window, and Is Seriously Wounded.

A daring thief shot David Silverman, a jeweler of 1,572 Madison Avenue, yesterday about noon, and escaped with three watches. The thief ran past a patrolman on a stationary post at Fifth Avenue and 106th Street and up the stairs of a tenement at 1,624 Madison Avenue, after which his movements were not traced by the police.

Silverman owes his life to the bad aim of the thief. The first shot went wild, crashing through the partition separating Silverman's living quarters from the store. The second hit him in the shoulder and flattened against a bone.

The police found some finger marks on the showcase robbed by the thief, but Mrs. Goldie Silverman, the jeweler's wife, said they were her own. Special attention was given to a finger mark on the crystal of a watch dropped by the thief as he fled, but all were smeared by the passage of his hands over the glass.

Silverman's wound was dressed by Dr. A. Greenstein of 23 East 117th Street, and soon after he sat in the rear of the store and told of the robbery and shooting. He said he was in the rear of the store, at his luncheon with his wife, when he heard the buzzer which indicated the opening of the front door. He hurried to the glass door in the partition between the store and living room, and saw a young man, in a blue serge suit and blue cap, opening the glass door of the show window, in which was a display of watches and diamonds. Silverman opened the door, and the young man turned, with an oath, and faced him.

"Drop that tray!" yelled Silverman.

For answer the young man drew a revolver and fired. There was a puff of white smoke, a shriek from Mrs. Silverman, and a crash of splintered wood. The young man fired again, and Silverman, who was half way down the aisle in a wild charge toward the thief, fell on his face. Mrs. Silverman stumbled over his body, and the thief, hurriedly seizing some of the watches in his left hand, departed. As he opened the door he dropped a gold watchcase, and a finger print on it is the only certain clue the police have with which to trace him.

Closing the door behind him, the thief wound a piece of cloth around the doorknob and a screw eye on the sash to hinder pursuit. Then he walked leisurely a block to the corner of 106th Street. The two shots, however, had aroused the neighborhood. Henry Price, who lives above the store, hurried to the street. He saw the thief walking toward the corner, stuffing the watches into his pocket, and raised the cry of "Stop, thief!" Silverman's assailant turned the corner to the left, and, breaking into a run, had nearly reached Fifth Avenue when Price turned the corner in pursuit.

Policeman Moye was on stationary post at 106th Street and Fifth Avenue. As the thief approached the policeman he stopped running and took to a walk, passing him without exciting suspicion or even attracting attention. Herman Schroeder, who has a candy store opposite the jewelry store, saw the thief tie the rag about the doorknob, and he, too, gave chase, with several of his customers and some patrons of a saloon near by. Their cries of "Murder!" and "Stop, thief!" attracted Patrolman Moye's attention. He blew his whistle for help and started after the thief, who by this time had nearly reached 108th Street.

The thief turned east in 108th Street and ran toward Madison Avenue, where, finding the whole neighborhood aroused, he ran into the open door of the tenement at 1,624 Madison Avenue and disappeared. Nothing further was seen of him. A patrolman was posted outside the door into which he had gone. But he never came out.

A TIMES reporter who went to the roof of the tenement discovered that all the tenements in the block bounded by Madison and Fifth Avenues and 108th and 109th Streets were of equal eight, four stories; that all were connected, and that all the scuttle holes were open. The block formed a letter U of tenements, with the open side on Fifth Avenue, and 1,624 Madison Avenue was the keystone of the arch of the U. There was only one break in the flat level of the roofs between 1,624 and 1,626 Madison Avenue, but this could be bridged by grasping a fire escape. There was a footprint on the topmost rung of this fire escape ladder.

All circumstances favored the escape of the thief. It was the dinner hour, as well as the hottest hour of the day, and the sun-baked roofs were deserted. Workmen who had been whitewashing some of the airshafts in the block had stopped work a few minutes before.

News of the robbery and shooting, transmitted from the East 104th Street station by Sergt. Sheehan, caused great excitement at Police Headquarters.

"Thief robs jewelry store, shoots man, escapes with loot," the message received at Headquarters, caused Second Deputy Commissioner Dougherty to grab his hat and dash down the stairs to his automobile. In fourteen minutes he was at the jewelry store. He had shot uptown fifty miles an hour at times, the whistle on his car sounding a warning to traffic to clear the way. He directed that special attention be given to the finger prints, as they seemed to be the best clue in the [illegible].

[illegible] the pursuers described the thief as [illegible] inches in height, 23 years old, and about 140 pounds in weight. There was [illegible] dispute about his dress, some of the pursuers declaring he wore gray [illegible] the majority insisting that [illegible] was blue in color. Silverman [illegible] to be about in a few days, [illegible] said.

He will be succeeded by John C. Meehan as secretary at a salary of $1,500. Dr. William H. Pohlgiane, Deputy Medical Superintendent at the Metropolitan, will go to the Cumberland Street Hospital in Brooklyn; Dr. I. S. Scofield from the Kings County to the Coney Island, and Dr. Charles F. Durnong, from the Coney Island to the Kings County Hospital. Dr. John S. Fitzgerald, Medical Superintendent of Brooklyn, has been [illegible] Medical Superintendent [illegible] of $6,000.

KENLON IS FIRE CHIEF, WINS CLOSE CONTEST

Guerin, a Close Competitor, Joins in Testifying to Fairness of the Examinations.

BEST CHOICE, SAYS CROKER

Other Fire Fighters Promoted—Mayor and Commissioner Johnson Congratulate Them at Headquarters Ceremony.

John Kenlon succeeds Edward F. Croker as Chief of the Fire Department in New York. Thus are fulfilled the prophecies, many good natured, some resentful, that have been flying about town for weeks. Every one predicted that the office would go to either Acting Chief Kenlon or Deputy Chief Guerin, and the betting was on Kenlon even before the ten Deputies met and battled with the stiff examination set by the Municipal Civil Service Commission. On Monday, when President Creelman forwarded the certified list of three eligible candidates to Fire Commissioner Johnson, one could find men who were willing to swear that Kenlon's name stood first. It did stand first. Yesterday morning, in the presence of Mayor Gaynor, ex-Chief Croker, Mr. Creelman, most of the ranking officers of the department, a host of newly created firemen, and a crowd of guests, Commissioner Johnson read the list, and it was led by Kenlon's name. The Mayor had ordered that the first named should be the new Chief.

Kenlon stood a little in front of his fellows. First he must shake hands with the Mayor, listen to much speechmaking, and see all the newly promoted officers walk up and salute. Finally the ceremonies were over and people began to mob him—fellow-firemen, friends, reporters—but he begged them all for just a moment.

"Wait till I see my wife," he said.

And they waited. Then came the handshaking, and none congratulated Kenlon more heartily that Croker. Some one told him he seemed pleased.

"I am pleased, very pleased," said the man who held for years the office that Kenlon is just entering. "He was my selection, my choice. And mind you, he'll make good. Don't make any mistake about that."

The Contest Was Close.

Although every one has been glibly consigning Kenlon to Croker's boots, Kenlon himself did not know until yesterday morning. That was positively asserted yesterday at Headquarters. He knew he was a strong favorite in the betting, he knew that with his knowledge of administration and of apparatus he must have done well in the examination, he knew that his record spoke with authority in his behalf, but he could not be at all sure that some one had not outdistanced him. It was bound to be close.

As it happened, the results were perilously close, for while Kenlon's percentage was 85.084, Deputy Chief Martin's was 84.792 and Guerin's 84.209. Langford, a tremendous favorite with the men in the department, was fourth with a qualifying mark of 82.125.

So Kenlon was worried. They say he has lost weight in the last two weeks. He had worked hard for the place and he had tasted the enjoyment of high authority as Acting Chief. Monday afternoon he fairly haunted Commissioner Johnson's office, but the Commissioner would not tell. He had determined to save the announcement to lend distinction to the reception at Fire Headquarters, and the few who positively knew were sworn to secrecy. It was yesterday morning at 8 o'clock that he telephoned to Kenlon so that he might have his family on hand.

"Good morning, Chief Kenlon," said the Fire Commissioner, and when the new Chief arrived at Headquarters he was smiling.

All Fair, Says the Mayor.

In answer, probably, to whispered charges that the examination was fixed for Kenlon to win, Mayor Gaynor, President Creelman, and Commissioner Johnson devoted their remarks yesterday to praising the whole course as splendidly impartial and without politics. The Mayor said:

> How much better it is for you, Chief of the Fire Department, and those who have been promoted here to-day, to know that you have been promoted on your own merits and not by the influence of anybody, politician, minister of the gospel, or any one else on earth.
> You have just taken the places that you have taken to-day on your own merits after a fair and square examination. That you all concede. Indeed, one of your members, Mr. Guerin, stepped up here and took the trouble to inform me that he had had a square examination and was entirely satisfied. I should think it would be satisfactory with you three men; the little difference between you as far as the examination is concerned is so small it is perfectly evident that any one of you would have filled the place admirably.
> And then you other men who have been promoted, you feel the same way.
> It has been said here that when I became Mayor I issued an executive order that you should all be appointed and promoted in numerical order on the list. In December, before I became Mayor, I had a man call at my house who was No. 2 on the list and No. 60 had been placed before he was—he had not been placed at all. I realized then, although it was a thing that I had thought of before, that that should no longer exist in the Police or Fire Departments of the City of New York. To have you men running all over creation to get influence to get you appointed was simply an abomination, considering that we have a law governing the case, and considering also that mere decency and good faith required that when a list was made up it should have been adhered to.
> I want to congratulate you upon your promotion. I have taken great interest in the Fire Department. Some say I was my own Police Commissioner for a while and took the most interest in the Police Department, but Mr. Waldo, who was here, and Mr. Johnson can attest otherwise, for I have taken more interest in the Fire Department than any other department in the city, unless it be the Catskill Water Board, which I have taken a large interest in.

The Commissioner spoke to all the men who stepped up in the 109 promotions and appointments that were the excuse for the ceremonies yesterday. Here is what he said:

> You have yourselves won these appointments in honest competition. No influence, political or otherwise, has in the slightest degree brought about your advancement. For this you must thank his Honor, the Mayor.
> Let me thank him, too, in that this policy has left the Fire Commissioner free to do the proper work of the Fire Department.
> As the situation now stands, and he more than any other in the history of our city has brought it about, there is nothing we can do for politicians and nothing they can do for us.

President Creelman pointed out that in these days of a huge force and elaborate apparatus, the Chief need be not so much a hero as a man of quick mind, technical training, strategic skill, and directive power. Now in Korea, he said, the Fire Chief dons a suit of oilskins, grasps a banner with an inscription of defiance to the spirit of fire, and walks into the middle of a conflagration, where he stands while the streams of water play protectively upon him. When it is all over he goes home, covered with glory. That is successful fire fighting in Korea. The house burns down, to be sure, but the Chief has been very intrepid. In New York, observed Mr. Creelman, astutely, we don't want the house to burn down.

Guerin Is Satisfied.

Kenlon, too, had his little say afterward about the fairness of the competition, but more effective than his speech, more effective than the Mayor's or the Commissioner's were these few words that Deputy Chief Guerin whispered to Mayor Gaynor as he shook hands with him. There were not a few who thought that Guerin would succeed Croker, and it was Guerin who said to the Mayor:

"I'm satisfied. I had a fair and square chance straight through."

"I am deeply conscious of the great responsibility attached to the position of Fire Chief," said Kenlon, when he had time to address the reporters assembled. "I am conscious, too, of the great honor of winning the appointment in fair competition from a staff of chief officers incomparably superior to anything of its kind in the world. We shall work unceasingly to maintain and advance the high standard of efficiency for which the department is justly famous."

Before the ceremonies were concluded Commissioner Johnson introduced President Anton A. Raven of the Life Saving Benevolent Association, who presented gold medals to three firemen who risked their lives to save others. Thomas A. Kelly and Lawrence J. Easley went into the water off the Battery to the rescue of a drowning man named Tony Boano. That was in April of this year. The third medal went to James J. Murphy, who rescued John J. O'Keefe off South Beach, S. I., in the Summer of 1909.

Of the more important promotions made yesterday Thomas J. Hayes and John F. King were made Deputy Chiefs. George J. Kuss, William Devlin, and John Rush were made Battalion Chiefs. Rush was Croker's chauffeur. He moved on to the list by the death of H. W. Reickenberg, who stood second in the examinations. Patrick L. O'Regan, Patrick Barry, and George Lloyd were made foremen, and John Cogan and Francis Lawler were made assistant foremen. A certificate of promotion to this rank was sent up for Thomas J. Regin, but he died on the last day of last year. Twenty-two firemen became engineers of steamers. Seventy-five probationers were appointed firemen.

One of the most interested spectators yesterday was a man of 86, Eli Bates, who was Fire Chief once himself. Twenty-seven years have passed since he resigned, and the last big fire in which he played a part was the burning of The World Building in 1881.

"Well, it isn't like it used to be in my day," he said, as he left, "but I am proudest of New York's Fire Department as it is to-day."

Kenlon as a Firefighter.

John Kenlon is not a tall man and his build is slight. His hair is gray, and he is heavily tanned. There is a good deal of humor in the expression of his eyes, and when he is not out directing the fight against a great fire his manner is gentle. He is a kindly man.

He was born in Dublin fifty years ago and when he was thirteen he went to sea, a turning point in his life that had its influence in the appointment made yesterday. He had fourteen years in the seven seas and when he quit he had both a chief engineer's license and a commanding officer's license. His first taste of fire fighting came when he was a quartermaster aboard the old Cunard liner Abyssinia. She took fire off the banks of Newfoundland, and only the most untiring effort kept her afloat until she was near enough to the New England coast to put safely ashore the 540 persons aboard her.

He entered the Fire Department in 1887 and in 1906 was made Battalion Chief. He became a Deputy Chief in May, 1909, and it was that promotion, made under unusual circumstances, that first aroused appreciable resentment against John Kenlon's advancement. Everybody knew that Croker liked Kenlon; some were ready to say he was pushing him. Anyway, when the Marine Branch of the Fire Department was created, for which it was determined to appoint a Deputy Chief, it was made a requirement that the candidate should have a master's license, and only Kenlon had one. But, answered the authorities, the head of the marine service must have such a license to have any authority on the water.

John Kenlon, the New Fire Chief.

RAM AGAIN FIGURES IN GAMBLING RAID

Dougherty Uses Flynn's Device for Smashing Into the Belford Club.

HOTEL PATRONS' RESORT

West Forty-eighth Street Place Filled with Well-Dressed Men—Eight Arrested and Paraphernalia Seized.

Second Deputy Police Commissioner Dougherty and fifteen Central Office detectives raided the Belford Club, 171 West Forty-eighth Street, corner Seventh Avenue, at 5 o'clock yesterday afternoon. The police took eight prisoners and three wagon loads of gambling paraphernalia to the West Forty-seventh Street Police Station. They failed to capture the alleged proprietor of the club, said to be "Bob" Smith, a half-brother of the race track plunger, familiarly known as "Pittsburg Phil," who died a few years ago.

The floors of the four-story building at the northwest corner of Forty-eighth Street and Seventh Avenue were occupied by the club. The ground floor is tenanted by Masterson's saloon. According to the police, the club was one of the most important gambling resorts in the city, and made a specialty of catering to the sport-loving guests of Broadway hotels. The detectives noticed several automobiles outside the resort when the raid began, and declared later that they belonged to or were rented by patrons of the club. The automobiles disappeared as soon as the raid was begun.

In spite of the apparently high-class type of the men who contributed to the profits of the club's backers, the apparatus taken to the West Forty-seventh Street Station was of the cheapest variety. Among the police spoils of war were flimsy crap tables, makeshift crap rakes, celluloid dice, warped faro boxes, dull-finished cards, roulette wheels out of true, and scarred blackboards, thinly painted with cheap paint for race charts. Eight telephones of the country circuit variety were also confiscated.

One hundred and fifty well-dressed men were in the resort when it was raided. Some of them attempted to escape by way of the roof, but found that way blocked by detectives, who persuaded them to return and be enumerated. The names and addresses of those present were taken by the police, and all but eight, for whom warrants had been issued by Magistrate Freschi before the raid, were allowed to go. The eight men named in the warrants were identified by Edward A. Rasche, who gathered the evidence on which the complaint against the club was issued. Rasche is a policeman attached to Police Headquarters. Some of the men in the place wore expensive jewelry.

According to the police, the resort was not conducted for "wise sports" familiar with New York gambling, but was run for the purpose of gathering in the money of strangers. The "boobs," as the gamblers call them, were introduced to the club through runners stationed in various hotel barrooms in the theatrical district, and the runners received a percentage of the losses of the victims.

The arrangements for the raid were made by Lieut. Becker of Commissioner Dougherty's staff. He was met at the Times Square Subway Station by fifteen men of the strong-arm squad, who selected advantageous posts to prevent the escape of inmates of the club. To gain entrance it was necessary to demolish two doors, one of them in a narrow, guarded passageway on the ground floor, and the other on the second floor. Both doors were smashed in with great expedition, the second with the aid of the hydraulic ram first used by Commissioner Flynn.

The prisoners taken gave the names of Frank Weed, 244 West Forty-ninth Street; Samuel Greenfield, 68 West 131st Street; Charles Boaken, 121 Hudson Street, Jersey City; Lawrence Billing, 587 Throop Avenue, Brooklyn; John Jones, 42 East Twenty-second Street; William Johns, 129 West 133d Street, and Frank Henry, 370 West Fifty-fifth Street. Weed is accused of being manager of the resort, Greenfield of being racing sheet hanger, Billing, Johns, and Henry of being doorkeepers, and Jones of being the street lookout of the resort. All the prisoners were booked as alleged violators of Section 970 of the Penal Code as common gamblers. [illegible]

ACCUSED OF ROBBING STORE.

Picked Up by Detectives from Description Given by Jeweler.

Herman Meyer, a clerk living at 354 East Fifty-fifth Street, was arrested last night at Ninth Avenue and Fifteenth Street by Detectives Schiebel, Fitzpatrick, and Mundo of the West Thirty-seventh Street Station on suspicion of being the thief who stole a diamond stickpin and a gold watch valued at $175 from the jewelry store of Charles Gordon, at 379 Eighth Avenue, on June 13. He was taken to Police Headquarters, where he denied having had any part in the robbery. The arrest was made on the strength of printed descriptions of the thief.

Gordon was in his store in Eighth Avenue at 2 o'clock on the afternoon of June 13 when a young man came in and asked to see some diamonds which were in a window tray. The jeweler stepped into the window to get the tray, and the thief closed the heavy partition between the window and the store, locking Gordon in. Then he picked up the pin and watch and ran away. Late last night the detectives were trying to get hold of Gordon to see if he could identify their prisoner.

TO MONTREAL IN MOTOR BOAT

Two Young Men Went There from This City and Back in Fifteen Days.

Athos D. Leveridge and David Van Dam of 437 Fifth Avenue are in town again after a little visit to Montreal, convinced that they made the trip between New York and the Canadian city in a manner never attempted before, and sure that if others try it in the future they will not make anything like the time in which this first expedition was accomplished. The two young men with two friends and a crew went to and from Montreal by inland waters in a forty-foot motor yacht in fifteen days.

Sheriff Names Four Aids.

Under a new law, Sheriff Shea appointed yesterday two more Deputies and two Assistant Deputies. The Deputies are John J. Doubleday of 152 East Twenty-eighth Street and Louis Leavitt of 1,285 Fifth Avenue. The Assistants are Henry H. McCrea of 452 Amsterdam Avenue and Barney Marks of 128 Broome Street. All are Republicans. One Deputy and one Assistant remain to be appointed, and it was said that these appointments will be given to the Independence League.

HUGHES SITS HERE IN POSTAL INQUIRY

Heads Commission to Investigate Demand for Advance in Second-Class Mail Rates.

CENT RATE FOR LETTERS

That's the Aim, Says Postmaster General, Opening the Case—Magazine Men Represented in Opposition.

Associate Justice Charles E. Hughes of the United States Supreme Court, returned to his home city yesterday to appear in his old rôle of investigator, by which he gained National prominence. He appeared yesterday as a member of the Congressional Commission to inquire into the manner and cost of handling second-class mail matter.

With Mr. Justice Hughes as associates on the commission, appointed by President Taft under a resolution of Congress, are President A. Lawrence Lowell of Harvard University and Harry A. Wheeler, Vice President of the United States Trust Company of Chicago. Colley E. Bell is Secretary.

The commission is sitting in the Federal Building, and though the corridors of the building were crowded as usual yesterday morning when the former Governor of the State entered and strode rapidly to the room selected for the inquiry, few recognized him. This was one of his first appearances here since his elevation to the Supreme Bench, and as he is wearing his beard much shorter than he formerly did he looks considerably changed.

For the Post Office Department there were present Postmaster General Frank H. Hitchcock, Second Assistant Postmaster General Joseph Stewart, and Third Assistant Postmaster General James J. Britt, all of whom made statements of considerable length, setting forth the attitude of the department toward the proposed increased rate for second-class mail, which includes newspapers, magazines, and other periodical publications. Postmaster E. M. Morgan of the New York office was present throughout the day, but took no part in the proceedings.

Magazine Publishers Represented.

Most of the large magazine publishers were represented by counsel, a number of the magazines having united in the engagement of Messrs. Herbert Noble, James B. Sheehan, and Alfred Houston to take care of their interests. Among the publications in this group are the Review of Reviews, Everybody's, McClure's, Saturday Evening Post, Ladies' Home Journal, Country Gentleman, Designer, Delineator, New Idea Woman's Magazine, Literary Digest, Woman's Home Companion, Farm and Fireside, and the American. Other smaller groups were also represented, and Gen. W. S. Shallenberg was present for the seventeen international Sunday school publications.

The inquiry had hardly more than got under way before it was interrupted by a request from the United States Marshal for Justice Hughes to sit as a District Judge and sign a bail bond. The thing was said by old court attendants to be unprecedented in their recollection. A man charged with being a "white slaver" was ready to give bail, but no District Judge was in the building, and the Marshal thought of Associate Justice Hughes. Evidently Justice Hughes was much surprised by the request, and in doubt what he should do about it.

"Have I, a Supreme Court Justice, the authority to sit in this case?" he asked looking down upon the small group of court officials. "Has any one looked it up?"

An Assistant District Attorney assured him that the matter had been looked up, and that he had quite enough authority to sign the bail bond. Thereupon, he did so at once.

In reply to questions by Mr. Noble, representing the magazines, and James L. Cowles, Secretary-Treasurer of the Postal Progress League, Justice Hughes stated that the Post Office Department would be permitted to state its case first, that all those who spoke for the department could be then cross-examined by the representatives of the publishers, and that, finally, the publishers could make any statement and file any documents for later examination they might desire.

Hitchcock States His Case.

Postmaster General Hitchcock opened for the department. He said his study of the postage rate problem had led him to believe that certain fundamental principles of administration, almost new to the Post Office Department at present, should be closely adhered to. These included the operation of the service on a self-supporting basis, maintained by imposing such charges as would yield an income equal to the expenses. They included, also, he said, such an adjustment of the postage charges as would make each class of mail matter pay for its own handling, and no more. He would further have the levying of postage rates made on the basis of the average cost of handling and carriage for the country as a whole, and, finally, postal laws should be enacted so definite in character as to be easy of interpretation and susceptible of uniform enforcement.

Mr. Hitchcock stated in this connection that when the books for the fiscal year of 1911 are closed they will show for the first time in many years a surplus of postal funds, and he hoped that this condition would become permanent. Mr. Hitchcock opposed any new classification of mail matter at this time, saying the present classification could be made to include all matter now admissible, and he doubted the expediency of attempting a revision. He then sought to set forth the large share second-class matter has in the burdens of the department, and the small percentage it pays of the total cost or even of its own cost.

"During 1910," he said, "there were carried in the mail 3,310,164,623 pieces of first-class mail, consisting of letters, other sealed matter, and postal cards. This mail averaged in weight 0.35 of an ounce a piece, making 45.1 pieces to the pound. The cost of handling and carriage for this mail was $86,792,511.35, an average of 47 cents a pound, while the postage charge was $154,796,668.08, leaving a clear profit of $68,004,156.73.

"During the same year there were carried 4,336,259,864 pieces of second-class matter, newspapers and other periodical publications, averaging 3.33 ounces a piece, or 4.8 pieces to the pound. The cost of handling and carriage was $80,791,615.03, or a little less than 9 cents a pound, while the postage return was only $10,607,271.02, leaving a total loss of $70,184,344.01.

"From a review of the rates provided for the several classes of mail, it will be observed that in comparison with the cent-a-pound charge for second-class matter the rate on third-class matter is 700 per cent. higher; that on fourth-class matter 1,500 per cent. higher, and that on letter and other first-class matter 3,100 per cent. higher. While it is true that the expense of handling and carrying second-class mail is less than for other mail, due to the size and weight of single pieces, to relief from the cancellation of stamps, and to the fact that a considerable part of the bagging, sorting, and labeling in the offices of origin is done by the publishers, nevertheless a charge of 1 cent a pound covers but a small fraction of the actual cost.

Letter Postage Too High.

"The present self-supporting condition of the service is made possible only by the fact that other classes of mail, particularly the first class, are excessively taxed to make up the loss caused by the inadequate charge on the second class. This will be better understood when it is noted that although first-class matter comprised during the fiscal year 1910 only [illegible] per cent. of all the revenue-producing domestic mail, it yielded a net profit of [illegible], while second-class matter, comprising [illegible] per cent. of all the revenue-producing domestic mail, yielded but $10,607,271.02, leaving the tremendous loss of $70,184,344.01. Thus the deficit caused by the heavy loss on the handling and carriage of second-class matter was met by the profit accruing from first-class matter."

Mr. Hitchcock here made a plea for equalization of the rate on second-class matter on the ground that it would at once make possible the reduction of letter postage from 2 cents to 1 cent an ounce. This reduction would come about from the fact, he said, that the present profit in handling first-class matter was approximately equal to the loss sustained in the transportation of second-class mail.

Favors Gradual Readjustment.

Mr. Hitchcock said, however, that he did not believe that the rate for second-class mail should be at once advanced to where it would cover the cost of handling and carriage, although that should be the ultimate end in view.

"For the present," said he, "an increase of only one cent a pound is recommended, thus making a flat rate of 2 cents a pound, which should be regarded as merely tentative, however, leaving for future determination such additional increase as may be found necessary to meet the cost."

The Postmaster General served notice on the commission that if by any chance it should see fit to recommend the continuance of the present rate—a "merely nominal postage rate," he called it—his department could not consistently do otherwise than renew its recommendation for a higher rate of postage on the advertizing portions of magazines.

Stewart Explains Railroad Charges.

The statement from Second Assistant Postmaster General Stewart, following Mr. Hitchcock, laid before the commission the methods by which the cost of handling second-class matter had been arrived at. This had to be done with great care to be of any value for accuracy, since all mail is carried together, and fluctuates in amount at different periods of the year. He opened with the assertion that while second-class matter constituted 63.91 per cent. of the entire weight and 29.24 per cent. of the number of pieces, it yielded only 5.19 per cent. of the revenue of the postal service. He denied that the Government paid the railroads excessive rates for transportation, and added that the current report that the roads received 9 cents a pound for carrying second-class matter was highly misleading.

"The term 'transportation,'" said he, "has sometimes been used in its wide sense as covering not only the cost of carrying, but that of handling, distributing, and delivering the mails, and has been unfortunately misunderstood as meaning only the carriage on railroads. The department's estimate of an average cost of 9 cents a pound covers not only the cost of railroad transportation of second-class matter with its equipment for the average of all hauls, which is 588 miles, but that of all other classes of transportation, and also the cost of collecting, separating, distributing, and delivering such mail. If magazines are considered separately, the cost for transportation on railroads and otherwise, because they have a longer average haul than other second-class matter, is over 5 cents a pound for the length of their average haul, which is 1,048 miles."

The hearing for the Post Office Department closed with an argument by Second Assistant Postmaster General Britt, who declared that if all the magazines and newspapers were excluded from the second-class rates because of a circulation gained not on the merits of the publications but because of some voting contest or offer of premiums as a bait, not 10 per cent. of all in the country would be undisturbed.

Men's Two-Garment Mohair Suits—at Saks' formerly 18.00, 20.00 and 22.00
now 13.00

¶ Mohair has got on in the world. It has always enjoyed an inside rather than an outside reputation. Merely a lining originally, and largely that now, it has latterly become favorably known as a suit fabric. It has come out of obscurity and superseded a host of Summer fabrics, and the wonder is that every man in town has not a mohair in his wardrobe.

¶ The mohair suits in this sale are two-garment models, made of Priestley cravenetted mohairs, in the newest fabric designs, and according to Saks standards. Reduced to 13.00 for this sale, they are at once a bargain and a confutation of the fallacy that thirteen is unlucky.

Men's Black Silk House or Office Coats

A silk house or office coat at the price of an alpaca coat, that is the sum and substance of this little story. Is the other fellow to absorb this opportunity entirely, or shall we reserve a coat for you? R. S. V. P.

Sale of Men's Shirts values 1.75, 2.00 and 2.50
now 1.10

¶ At the beginning of August we always review the shirt situation very carefully. We have just put 5,500 Men's soft and laundered shirts through the Third Degree and found them guilty of abusing the hospitality of our shelves. Having survived their welcome at 1.75, 2.00 and 2.50, they will be speeded to you at 1.10.

¶ It is but fair to state, however, that aside from the charge of idleness, these shirts admirably fulfill all those conditions which induced us to take them in. They are splendidly made, of fine domestic and imported madras and mercerized cloths, in plain colors and striped effects. Plain or pleated negligees, and soft bosom models with French cuffs. All sizes and sleeve lengths.

¶ The duration of this sale will be determined by you. In spite of his alleged indifference to opportunity, it is our experience that man is ever ready to assimilate a good thing.

LORDS' VETO CRISIS BECOMES HUMOROUS

Liberals Seek to Avoid Creating Peers, for Which They Fought Tooth and Nail.

OBJECTION TO PUPPET PEERS

Unionist Disruption Is Likely to Keep That Party Out of Power for Years to Come.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Aug. 1.—There has rarely arisen in the history of politics a more ludicrous situation than that which has developed out of what is gravely called "the constitutional crisis in England." Its aspects daily become more comic.

To-day we have Lord Morley sending out an appeal to the Liberal Peers to be in their places on Wednesday week, so as to prevent the "undesired consequences" that must follow the rejection of the Veto bill, designed to limit the powers of the House of Lords. These "undesired consequences" are the creation of new peers, for which the Liberal Party has fought tooth and nail.

Two Kings of England have been warned by implication that their thrones were not worth an hour's purchase unless they agreed to empower the Government to create as many new peers as might be required in a certain emergency, and now that the emergency has arisen, the Government, which extracted the royal guarantee, is shaking in its shoes lest it should be forced to take advantage of the royal consent.

"It is revolution!" cries Lord Hugh Cecil, "and Mr. Asquith is a traitor!"

Mr. Asquith spends a quiet week end in the country, and the nation generally devotes its most serious attention to the question of where it shall spend the Summer holidays. The Unionist leaders, who at one time lifted up their hands and called upon Heaven to witness that never before in the history of the country had a Parliamentary majority arrogated to itself power to override the throne and Constitution as the Liberal Party were doing, are now moving heaven and earth to get their followers not to vote in opposition to the bill, which is the only tangible outcome of that liberal policy. All this because a relatively small number of politicians have kicked over the traces of political partisanship and thereby upset the calculations of other politicians who were playing the political game according to the rules.

Mr. Asquith will never create puppet peers unless there is no way out of it. Mr. Balfour and Lord Lansdowne are both anxious in the extreme to save him the necessity of doing so. A list of new Liberal peers, which was drawn up some months ago by the chief whip of the party, was a toy gun designed to intimidate those who did not know that it was charged with blank cartridge, and now the same device is being utilized by a section of the Unionist Party to cast terror into the souls of a hundred or so noble lords whose knowledge of politics justifies their nickname of "backwoods men."

Reports were spread to-day that the Government would to-night announce the creation of the first batch of new peers in sufficient numbers to outvote the noble lords who threaten to die in the last ditch rather than abstain from voting against the Veto bill when it again comes before the upper house next week. To-night, however, has brought no such announcement, the rumors of which were given a note of absurdity by the statement that Mr. Asquith himself would figure among the new creations.

Meanwhile, the most salient fact in the situation is the disruption of the Unionist Party, which began a process of slow suicide when it took up protection, and made a fatal issue certain when it committed the Lords to a policy of rejection of financial measures, which were solely within the province of the Commons. As Joseph Chamberlain was the protagonist of the protection policy, so his son Austen is one of the leaders in the new departure, which the stalwarts of the Unionist Party declare is the only course possible in the circumstances.

All indications are that the revolt against Mr. Balfour and Lord Lansdowne will have but one certain result—that of postponing for many years to come what is known as the swing of the pendulum in British domestic politics. Neither Lord Selborne nor Austen Chamberlain are of a calibre to snatch a victory out of the hopeless confusion of the Unionists. What otherwise will be the outcome even the keenest observers admit their inability to prognosticate.

Milwaukee Women and Children Escape from the Royal Kurhaus, Pyrmont.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BERLIN, Aug. 1.—A party of wealthy Milwaukee women, with their children, were among several hundred guests who had to flee for their lives, scantily clad, from the Royal Kurhaus Hotel at the famous watering place, Bad Pyrmont, in Western Germany, which was burned to the ground at 3 o'clock this morning.

There was a serious panic, but no lives were lost.

The Milwaukee people included Mrs. Fred Vogel, Mrs. Joseph Uihlein, and Mrs. Adolph Falk. The property loss is estimated at $750,000.

The hotel belonged to the Prince of Pyrmont.

GEIDEL'S PLEA, NOT GUILTY.

District Attorney Will Try to Start Boy Murderer's Trial on Aug. 21.

Paul Geidel, the seventeen-year-old bellboy who killed William Henry Jackson in the Hotel Iroquois, was arraigned before Judge Thomas C. T. Crain in General Sessions yesterday and pleaded not guilty to the indictment charging him with murder in the first degree.

Geidel was brought into the court room promptly at 10:30 o'clock and made to stand in line with a number of other prisoners until they had pleaded. When Court Clerk Cowing called Geidel's case his attorneys, James A. Gray and James Cleary, stepped forward and entered his plea. His mother and sister and Mary Gieger, a friend from Hartford, were in the court room.

In making the plea for the boy his counsel attacked the validity of the indictment on the ground that "it was not worth the paper it was written upon." Assistant District Attorney Charles Nott, who has been assigned to the case, said that he had no objection to a reasonable delay, but thought it would not be necessary to take more than a week to examine the indictment.

"I think this is a case where the defendant should be brought to trial at an early date," said Judge Crain. "You [looking at the counsel for the defense] should have such time as is necessary to prepare the case. I am confident that you will be able to pass upon the desirability of interposing a demurrer within a week and will give you one week from to-day."

Judge Crain added that he thought it would also be a very good plan if Mr. Gray prepared his case while preparing any motions he might see fit to make. District Attorney Nott then said that the District Attorney would attempt to have the case brought to trial on Aug. 21, and that he would make such a motion next Tuesday.

Orientals

The Largest Specialty Rug House in America

There is a common misconception that Oriental rugs are too high in price for the average or economical man.

If a purchaser has good taste and $18 in his pocket this house can fill his requirements.

For $100 a carpet size Wild's Oriental may be purchased, for a drawing room or a dining room.

Or when it comes to a $1,000 purchase, full value is supplied.

If your room calls for a rich, dark hued Beloochistan, a crimson Oushak or the brownish reds and creams of a Royal Bokhara—the exactly appropriate rug may be chosen from Wild's Orientals.

It is in having carefully selected designs IN SUFFICIENT VARIETY to meet EVERY requisition, at the MOST REASONABLE PRICE that the Wild establishment excels.

Confidence in the house from which you purchase Oriental rugs is like the karat mark in a gold ring.

The sifting-out process requires much extra labor, but our rich profit lies in the confidence it gains.

ACCUSED BANK MEN; THEN HE RETRACTED

Still Believes, Says Clerk, That Teller's Sheet was Destroyed and Fake One Substituted.

HAPPENED DAY OF FAILURE

Showed That Money Was Paid Out After Closing of the Mechanics' and Traders', Says George Frank.

A story of how he discovered suspicious acts in the Mechanics and Traders' Bank at the time that institution failed; of his taking his discoveries to a Manhattan newspaper which did not publish them, and of his subsequently signing a retraction when promised a place in the bank on its reopening, was told yesterday at the investigation of the affairs of the Union Bank of Brooklyn by George Frank, who was a clerk in the institution when it was the Mechanics' and Traders'. Frank said he had found that there had been a change of teller's sheets after the bank had closed; that he had discovered the correct sheet, torn in pieces, in a waste basket, and that he had pasted the parts together, taking this sheet to the newspaper office.

The day also brought forth a sharp letter from ex-Controller Edward M. Grout, who was President of the Union Bank, in which he denied statements made by ex-State Superintendent of Banks O. H. Cheney to the effect that the bank had made a false report to the Banking Department. Mr. Grout accused the department of having itself made a false statement of the assets of the bank, thus encouraging Mr. Grout and others to reopen the institution.

Frank, who is 24 years old, said that on the evening of the day the Mechanics and Traders' Bank closed, he picked the torn teller's proofsheet from the waste basket, where it had been thrown, and took it to his home, where he pasted it together. This sheet, he thought, gave evidence that money had been drawn out after the bank closed. At the suggestion of a man named Guest, who lived in the same house, Frank took the sheet of the last day's transactions to a Manhattan newspaper office. He was told that if his story could be corroborated it would be published. On the way to the newspaper office, Frank stopped at the Court House to see the District Attorney about the matter, he said, but Mr. Clarke was not at his office.

When he reached the bank next morning, Frank testified, he was called into the office of President David A. Sullivan. Paul Grout, the bank's attorney; President Sullivan, and other officials of the bank were there. He was asked what right he had to take a paper from the bank. A teller's sheet which, he alleged, had been made out after the first had been destroyed, was shown to him. Frank said he pointed out to those present several entries that had been made incorrectly. They wanted him to pick out the accounts he supposed had been paid after the bank closed.

"The paying teller was then brought in," continued Frank, "and he tried to prove that I was mistaken. I think I also mentioned my doubts as to the correctness of the signatures on certain checks. I asked to have the checks produced. I think I stated that the checks were not the same."

These checks covered entries in the teller's sheet. Frank said that Mr. Grout then talked over the telephone with some one, supposedly a lawyer.

"Mr. Grout," continued Frank, "said over the telephone that if the story was published, it might upset plans for reopening the bank, that he had money involved and might lose it, and be ruined."

Frank testified that he was then prevailed upon to sign a statement that he was mistaken in what he had told to the newspaper. He was told, he said, that he would be "taken care of" after the bank reopened—that is, that he would be retained in the employ of the bank. Frank said that he believed the statement he made to the newspaper to be true.

Miss Louise D. Burkhardt, who was private secretary to Mr. Sullivan, testified to the meeting of Frank with the bank's officers. Mr. Grout's talk on the telephone, she thought, was with Clarence J. Shearn, who had done some legal work for the bank. The telephone talk was about the story which Frank had taken to the newspaper. Mr. Grout said its publication would hurt the bank. A statement in the nature of an affidavit was then dictated to her by Mr. Grout, she said. The gist of it was that George Frank was in error as affecting the several items he had taken to the newspaper. She heard Frank weeping, and admitted that it had looked to her as if he was coerced into signing the denial.

Mrs. Emma Frank, mother of George, testified that she received $3,000 she had in the bank in two payments shortly after the institution reopened. She obtained it as a loan on notes.

The hearing was adjourned until next Monday.

CURPHEY BAIL FORFEITED.

Judge Mulqueen Decides Against Him and Kirkbride, Mellon Witnesses.

Judge Mulqueen, in General Sessions yesterday, forfeited the $2,500 bail bond in the cases of Alfred George Curphey and Capt. Thomas W. Kirkbride, the Englishmen wanted in Pittsburg to testify in the suit for divorce brought by Andrew W. Mellon against his wife.

Both men were arrested in this city on June 16 charged with obstructing justice and arraigned before Judge Mulqueen in General Sessions and held in $2,500 bail each. The bond was furnished by the National Surety Company. Gov. Dix refused to sign the extradition papers on the charge of obstructing justice, and another charge of being fugitives from justice was made against them. Gov. Dix signed the requisition papers on this charge, and when their case was called on July 12 they failed to put in an appearance and the case was postponed until July 14.

On July 14 they did not appear and Judge Mulqueen took the matter of forfeiting their bail bond under consideration. Counsel for the two Englishmen contended that the bond was given on the first charge against them, and as the Governor had refused to sign the extradition papers on this charge, the bond could not be forfeited on the second. Judge Mulqueen, in his opinion, stated, however, that inasmuch as the defendants had been admitted to bail for thirty days as a reasonable time within which proceedings for their extradition might be perfected, the bonds must be construed to cover that period.

WOMAN FIGHTS HOTEL THIEF.

Mrs. Judell Fell or Was Thrown from Window to Her Death.

Special to The New York Times.

ST. LOUIS, Aug. 1.—Mrs. Max Judell of 305 Union Boulevard, whose husband is out of town, died at the City Hospital at 8 o'clock A. M. to-day following injuries suffered when she fell or was thrown from a third-story window of the Vendome Hotel, at Fifteenth and Olive Streets. She was found unconscious in the alley back of the hotel at 4 A. M.

Search is being made for a man who went to the hotel with her at 12:30 A. M. and registered "R. Pappas, with his wife." He left the hotel at 3:30 A. M., telling the clerk he would return in a few minutes. Mrs. Judell's watch stopped at 3:24 o'clock. It was pinned to her jacket. The crystal was broken.

A rope fire escape hung out of the window of the room, and dangled within a few feet of where Mrs. Judell was found. Bruises on her arms and legs and the fact that more than $70 was found upon her led Police Capt. Schwartz to believe that an attempt was made to rob her, and that she fell from the window in attempting to escape her companion.

S. W. E. Lockman, manager of the hotel, was acting as clerk when the couple went there at 12:45 o'clock. He describes the man as tall and slender, smooth-shaven, and of sandy complexion. He wore a gray suit and a black felt hat, and appeared to be about 25 years old. Lockman had never seen the man before, nor the woman.

"There was no sound of a disturbance in the room," the manager said.

Physicians at the hospital found other injuries besides the skull fracture. On both of Mrs. Judell's arms above the elbows were livid bruises, which seemed to have been made by hands tightly grasping the arms.

NEW SUBWAY CONTRACT LET.

Oscar Daniels Company Gets Section No. 12 on Lexington Avenue Line.

The Public Service Commission let another subway contract yesterday. It was for Section No. 12 of the Broadway-Lexington Avenue route, between 106th and 118th Streets, and the contract went to the Oscar Daniels Company of 38 Park Row. The contract price on the unit bid submitted by the Daniels Company was $2,825,740.74, but that was on the basis of the large bore subway, and the cost based on the reduced bore which present plans contemplate will be substantially less.

The Public Service Commission announced yesterday the receipt of the complaint of the Admiral Realty Company, which is suing to hold up the Lexington Avenue contracts. The commission also went through the form of certifying the elevated certificates for the Interborough third tracks and extensions in the Bronx. These certificates were adopted by the Commission last week, but it is considered doubtful if the Interborough will accept the terms proposed, as such terms follow, in the main, the findings of the McAneny report.

STARVING IN THE STREET.

Couple Finally Appeal for Help to the Police, and Not in Vain.

Lieut. Nugent of the West 100th Street Station glanced up from his desk yesterday and saw a young couple before him.

"I'm out of work. We haven't had a thing to eat since Saturday. I tried to get work for a week here, but couldn't find any. We're nearly starved."

The man said he was James Thompson. A week ago he came here with his wife from Hoosic Falls, N. Y., to look for work, and wandered the whole city over to find it without success. He had some money when he came, but it soon was spent, and they were forced to live in the streets.

Lieut. Nugent, Clerk John Baxter, and Acting Captain Duggan raised a fund of $3, and the two sat down to a sumptuous feast of beans, potatoes, and tea and bread.

Thompson said he didn't care what he did, just so he was able to earn a livelihood.

53 KILLED HERE IN JULY.

Street Accidents Injured 215—Sixteen Killed at Grade Crossings.

The National Highways Protective Society, through Secretary Cornell, announced yesterday the statistics of accidents due to vehicular traffic in New York City for the month of July, 1911.

There were 53 killed and 215 injured. Of the killed 23 were under 16 years of age. There were 19 killed by automobiles, 16 by trolley cars, and 18 by wagons. The deaths due to automobiles were more than twice as many as in July of last year, when 9 were killed in that manner.

There were 18 accidents in this State in the month at grade crossings in which 16 persons were killed and 22 injured. Of the 18 accidents 10 involved automobiles and 8 wagons. In New Jersey 7 grade crossing accidents occurred in the month, 3 to automobiles, 3 to wagons, and 1 trolley. Four persons were killed and 8 injured.

FIXING ACTUAL VALUE IN TENNESSEE DEAL

Stanley Committee Attempts to Show Properties Worth $140,000,000 Were Sacrificed.

TRUST PAID $30,000,000

Engineers Who Reported on Ore Properties Sold to Steel Corporation in 1907 Are Under Examination.

The Stanley Congressional Committee, which is investigating the United States Steel Corporation, and, just now, especially, its absorption of the Tennessee Coal and Iron Company, devoted the entire day yesterday to the examination of three mining engineers with a view to obtaining data on which to base a valuation of the Tennessee Company's property when it was purchased by the Steel Corporation during the panic days of 1907 for approximately $30,000,000.

The three experts were Charles Page Perin, Walter Moore, and William M. Given. With T. H. Aldrich and J. W. Worthington they constitute a board of consulting engineers which prepared a report on the mineral resources of the property in 1904, when there was a plan on for its consolidation with the Republic Iron and Steel Company and the Sloss-Sheffield Steel and Iron Company. This negotiation fell through, and a little later the Tennessee property was bought by the syndicate, the managers of which, Grant B. Schley and L. C. Hanna, afterward sold it to the Steel Corporation.

The report made by the engineers was put in evidence and they were questioned on it. It did not attempt to give any valuation to the deposits of iron ore and coal, but merely described their extent and character. Tentative efforts to draw from the engineers during the hearing some estimate of the value of the property which the Steel Corporation got for $30,000,000 were largely baffled by the distinctions into which they immediately launched as to grades of ore or coal and the extent of the deposits in various parts of the company's holdings.

It was brought out, however, that, according to the report, the estimated iron ore owned by the Tennessee Company amounted to 412,798,500 tons and the coal to 1,628,639,500 tons. The experts agreed that they had never heard of another tract anywhere in the world which equaled it for richness or deposits of both iron and coal in close proximity and consequently in facilities for producing pig iron.

It was testified that pig iron could be produced in the Birmingham district at $4 a ton less than in Pittsburg. It was also testified that an independent owner with a small tract in the same region had refused an offer of 35 cents a ton royalty for his ore holdings, and that on a royalty basis the coal in the ground was worth 5 or 6 cents a ton.

Mr. Given, who lives in Birmingham, was also questioned as to the real estate value of the land, aside from its mining rights, and testified that it was worth from $20 an acre in some places to $2,000 an acre in the vicinity of Birmingham. The total holdings amounted to about 500,000 acres.

The purpose of all this, although no conclusions were drawn during the hearing, is to show that the ore was worth at least 35 cents a ton, or about $140,000,000, and the coal 5 cents a ton, or $80,000,000 more, making a total of at least $200,000,000, aside from the value of the land, instead of the $30,000,000 the Steel Corporation paid for it. This, some of the committeemen think, would support the theory that the Steel Corporation forced the sale and got the property at a bargain.

"We are trying to get at the real value of the property," said one of the committee yesterday. "The trouble with the estimates made by financiers is that they are based on the price of the stock. This, of course, was kept down by the fact that it would be impossible to buy a majority in the market, as a majority was pooled. Wall Street also failed to take account of the fact that while the company paid out only $1,200,000 in dividends in a year, it put $6,000,000 into improvements the same year out of earnings. The figure of 35 cents a ton for the ore holding is low, as evidence has been given that the Steel Corporation values its own holdings at $1 a ton, and actually pays $1.65 a ton for ore on Lake Superior, which it has to transport 1,000 miles to Pittsburg."

Grant B. Schley is scheduled as the chief witness for to-day. It was the financial difficulties in which his firm of Moore & Schley found themselves toward the end of October, 1907, that brought about the purchase of the Tennessee Company by the Steel Corporation.

IN JAIL ON WEDDING DAY.

Prospective Bride's Tears Fail to Save Man Held for Grand Larceny.

Harry Ulrich, 24 years old, who gave his address as 361 West 121st Street, Manhattan, was arraigned yesterday afternoon in the Adams Street Court, Brooklyn, charged with grand larceny. In the courtroom sat Miss Belle Hancock, 24 years old, a governess of Englewood, N. J., dressed in white, vainly hoping that Ulrich might be discharged so that their marriage, which had been planned for yesterday afternoon, might take place. Despite the tears of Miss Hancock, who is a tall, handsome brunette, Magistrate Voorhees held Ulrich in $1,000 to await extradition papers from New Jersey, where the theft is alleged to have been committed.

The young man was arrested on Monday night, at 94 Woodhull Street, Brooklyn, where he and Miss Hancock were making final arrangements for their wedding on Tuesday. He pleaded with Detective Manning of the Brooklyn Detective Bureau not to arrest him until after his marriage.

The complainant is Mrs. Mary Ulrich of Bergenfield, N. J., his stepmother, who alleges that Ulrich stole a horse and wagon valued at $500 and sold them in Hackensack for $35. "It's all a terrible mistake," said Miss Hancock in court yesterday. "Dear Harry would not steal anything. He had been driving the horse and wagon so long that he believed he owned it." Ulrich will probably be taken to Jersey to answer to the charge to-day.

BOY DIES OF RABIES.

Dog Bit Him a Month Ago While Playing at His Home.

William Aherns, 7 years old, of 806 Washington Street died yesterday afternoon of rabies in St. Vincent's Hospital. He was bitten by a bull terrier July 1, and, though the hospital physicians fought hard to save him, they failed.

The dog was owned by James McCann, who lived in the same house as the dead boy. Aherns ran suddenly into the hall of the tenement one day while playing, and the dog jumped at him, biting his upper lip and forehead. Neighbors ran up, and the dog bit at them and jumped at a policeman, but he killed it.

The brain and spinal cord of the dog were sent to the Board of Health, where it was found the animal had rabies. The boy received the utmost attention, but Monday morning convulsions developed, which continued until he died.

YOAKUM BACK FROM A TRIP.

Conditions in Southwest Good, but Doesn't Expect a Boom Just Yet.

B. F. Yoakum, Chairman of the St. Louis & San Francisco, is at his office in this city after a month's trip through the Southwest, where he found business conditions to be fairly good. He says that crop conditions are very [illegible] ring corn and wheat in parts of Oklahoma, Kansas and Northern Texas. Cotton is in excellent condition.

Mr. Yoakum says that he does not look for any large increase in business in the near future, but he expects to see [illegible] continue fairly active if the present outlook for crops is borne out by the harvests.

GIMBEL BROTHERS Announce
The ONCE-A-YEAR MILL CLEAN-UP
Of the Famous
WHITTALL WILTON CARPETS

This news will delight every housekeeper who loves beautiful floor-coverings, for no carpets are more elegant, finer woven, or better-wearing than the superb products of the famous Whittall mills.

The manufacturers of these carpets carry a large stock at the mill, in what they call their "cut order department." This means that hundreds of fine carpet stores throughout the country carry only sample lengths of these carpets to show their customers, while the mill carries the stock. When the order is taken from the customer, it is forwarded to the mill, and the exact quantity desired comes back. That means that each year there is a surplus stock left in the mill. This is sold out to one house, at one time.

Gimbel Brothers secured this fine collection of many thousand yards of these beautiful Wilton Carpets for this mid-Summer distribution. The entire collection will be shown today in one of the largest sections of our Carpet Store, under the best possible light. There is a splendid variety of designs and colorings, many being in the much-wanted two-tone shades of green, rose, blue, red, brown, as well as the refined Persian designs. Many of the patterns have 13-inch or 22½-inch borders or stair carpets, to match. These Whittall Carpets are made under three trade-marks, and will be priced as follows, today, and until sold:

WHITTALL and VICTORIA Wilton Carpets, regularly $3.25, Now $2.25 Yard. TEPRAC Wilton Carpets, regularly $2.25, Now $1.65 Yard

We have also consummated, and will place on sale today, a large special purchase of Wilton Velvet Carpets, from the famous mills of Alexander Smith & Sons, principally in hall and stair patterns. Regularly sold for $1.65, now $1.30 a yard.

This occasion presents the best time of the entire year for the securing of fine carpets at reduced prices. If you are not ready to have the carpets laid now, you can purchase from this remarkable collection, have the carpets made up, and we will deliver and lay them at your convenience. 6th floor.

THE WOOL DUTIES.

Undoubtedly the House Democrats will insist that the duties on wool provided for in the La Follette bill, which passed the Senate, shall be lowered to bring them nearer the general level of the rates fixed in the Underwood bill, which passed the House. Mr. UNDERWOOD, who is one of the conferrees in behalf of the House, will be in a position to look out for that. The House is Democratic. Democrats constituting a majority of the Ways and Means Committee, it is their privilege to originate tariff legislation, and they are right to demand that any bill that goes to the President shall conform to their ideas rather than to the views of any Republican insurgent in either house. We think, however, the Democrats will be well advised if, in conference, they exhibit a spirit of reasonable compromise, to the end that a bill reducing the wool and woolen duties may actually be sent to the President.

The duties imposed by the present law, which are those of the Dingley law not changed in the Payne-Aldrich enactment, are so indecently extortionate that they have no defenders save among their immediate beneficiaries. It is, nevertheless, proposed that the robber taxes of Schedule K shall await the report of the Tariff Board in order that revision may have a scientific basis, taking into account the difference of production cost here and abroad. These duties were not laid in that way. They measure, not the difference in the cost of the product here and abroad, but the greed and the hardihood of the interests in whose behalf they were written into the tariff. Nobody can possibly frame a reasonable argument why duties that constitute thievery should await the report of a scientific body of experts. A and B each own a sheep pasture. The pastures adjoin, but the fence is out of repair, and the line has never been accurately surveyed. Some of B's sheep have mysteriously disappeared. It is proposed, therefore, that a surveyor be called in with his scientific instruments to run the line in accordance with the deeds and records, to the end that when a new fence is built it may indicate the true boundary. The surveyor would require some days, possibly some weeks, to make his survey and draw his maps. Would it not be reasonable, meanwhile, to demand that A shall stop stealing B's sheep?

That is what the revision of the wool schedule comes to. It is to put an end to larcenous extortions for the benefit of woolen manufacturers at the expense of consumers of woolen clothing. Certainly it will be possible to reduce these duties largely without violating any principle which Congress may be expected to deduce from the report of the Tariff Board. The Democrats came into control in the House because they were pledged to reduce the tariff. Here is an opportunity to make a beginning. There is no reason of politics or of consistency why they may not accept the help of Republican insurgents of the Senate in getting some bill through, particularly as they cannot be sure of the support of all the Democrats in that body for their tariff measures. Senator BAILEY yesterday voted against the House Free List bill, defeating it by a tie vote, 39 to 39. Had he voted for the bill it would have passed and gone to the President. Now it is lumbered up with amendments, some of them not offered in good faith, and a conference on that measure will be necessary. If Mr. UNDERWOOD can come to an agreement with the Senate in the conference on the Wool bill, an agreement that does not involve too great a concession on the part of the Democrats of the House, he will be well advised to make it.

[illegible] AND WARREN AS MARTYRS.

[illegible] astonishing how hard Mr. GOMPERS makes it to put him into jail for contempt of court. Time has just been [illegible] to answer the complaint [illegible] him regarding an offense of [illegible] and he adds that he [illegible] jail by apologizing. In[illegible] why does he not go to jail [illegible] his martyr's crown, in[illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] compared with the procedure of WARREN, the Socialist editor of Kansas. He used the mails to offer a reward for the kidnapping of Gov. TAYLOR of Kentucky in the manner in which WARREN thought that his friends had been kidnapped. This is merely a sample of his crusade against our existing social arrangements conducted in the curiously named newspaper "The Appeal to Reason." A heartless jury convicted him, and a Judge ripe for the recall sentenced him to serve six months and to pay $1,500.

It is a crown of glory for a Socialist to go to jail for the cause, but to require a Socialist to find $1,500 is a cruel and unusual punishment which ought to be unconstitutional, if it is not. At this stage President TAFT appeared upon the scene with his smile and a pardon. He thought WARREN more ridiculous than dangerous, and that he ought to be so treated. But WARREN declined to join the petition for his pardon, and he declined to accept it. He is actually in jail, and there seems no way to get him out. He is something like a martyr, and this advertisement of him and his cause is valuable. Mr. GOMPERS may have one on the same terms. If he declines it he is under suspicion of being a humbug martyr, eager for glory without paying the price.

THE VETO OF THE STILWELL BILL.

What is wrong in the Mayor's memorandum accompanying his veto of the Stilwell bill, a bill drawn to empower a committee which is anxious to put the new County Court House in the City Hall Park, is unimportant. Mayor GAYNOR is right when he says that the members of the Board of Estimate "do not wish to locate the Court House in City Hall Park," and that he had asked that this bill, from which he withheld his approval a few weeks ago, "should be so amended as to give the Board of Estimate the exclusive power to select a Court House site within six months." It was not so amended, therefore he vetoes it.

Some people, according to the Mayor, would have the Legislature exclude consideration of the park as a site. Again, the Mayor complains, these or other people seem to think that the Stilwell bill was passed so that the Court House Board and the Board of Estimate, acting together, may select the City Hall Park to the exclusion of other sites. The intent of the bill was, as we have said, to enable the Court House Board to override the will of the Board of Estimate in the matter of this selection, and, as everybody knows, the Court House Committee had already officially approved the park site.

Mayor GAYNOR's veto defeats the intent of the bill, and that is important. The forces of public opinion, as represented by civic organizations and bodies of eminent experts, should suffice to prevent the Court House from being placed where, emphatically, it does not belong.

"DOLLAR" DIPLOMACY.

In the North American Review for August Mr. OSCAR S. STRAUS discusses in an admirable spirit "American Commercial Diplomacy," which has been bitterly assailed at home and somewhat criticised abroad under the offensive and impertinent title of "dollar" diplomacy. He points out that our foreign policy, from the days of WASHINGTON to those of TAFT, has had for its essential object the extension of our commerce, and in that regard necessarily differed from the foreign policy of European nations, which was largely inspired by dynastic jealousies and by the desire to extend or defend dominion.

The latter motive has not been, and could not be, entirely absent from the minds of American statesmen. Certainly the bargain that FRANKLIN and ADAMS drove with England at the close of the war for independence was as successful a piece of land-grabbing as England herself has ever achieved, and the soreness it left in Canada is not yet extinct, but rather has been intensified by the settlement of the Northwest boundary, and, latest, of the Alaskan boundary. With these feats, with the acquisition of Florida and the Louisiana Purchase, with the vast area seized or bought of Mexico and with empire obtained in the Pacific, the American Nation unquestionably must own to a marked tendency toward expansion which only Great Britain and Russia can rival. But it remains true that trade has been the main object of our diplomacy, since the vital motive of our expansion has been our desire for increased trade.

Fortunately for the progress of civilization, our interests and our ambition in the direction of trade have led us to resist (except across our own borders) restrictions upon trade. They have incited us to insist upon the right of any nation to remain neutral during wars between other nations, and to maintain vigorously the rights of neutrals in time of war. They have made us the advocates of the principle of "free ships, free goods." And they have induced us—not quite consistently at all times—to seek the limitation of privateering, a form of semi-official but irresponsible plunder which was long since abandoned in operations on land by civilized Powers. Mr. STRAUS gives an interesting résumé of the history of our diplomacy with reference to these objects, and of its development in recent years in connection with the "open door." He cites the eloquent and witty phrase of Mr. HAY as to "The Monroe Doctrine and the Golden Rule," a phrase which, we believe, that accomplished statesman voiced before our application of a rule far from golden to the Panama affair. In the same line, and even more significant of the advance of "enlightened self-interest," is the reciprocity agreement with Canada, which had not been accepted by Congress when Mr. STRAUS's article was written.

It is, on the whole, a creditable record that our diplomatists have made, and it is none the less encouraging because it must be frankly admitted that their motives have not always been altruistic, have, indeed, often been egoistic, and their methods neither wholly candid nor always lacking in harshness verging on brutality. There is an obvious contradiction between the idea of the open door and the maintenance of bars and bolts on the inside of every door of our own communicating with other nations near or far. But we may recall, thankfully, if not proudly, that the trade we have pursued so relentlessly has swollen to a tide that beats always more strongly against the tariff barriers we have raised about our own markets. We are being forced to admit, and to act on the admission, that one-sided trade is neither profitable nor possible in the long run. The punishment of the protectionist party at the polls last year was a telling expression of the popular conviction on this point. It is to the great credit of Mr. TAFT that he listened to that expression, and, calling in the best principles of our "commercial diplomacy," he responded to it by the greatest trade agreement that our country has known for nearly half a century.

SATISFYING THE DISSATISFIED.

On the same day Representative BERGER, the Socialist member from Wisconsin, and Senator OWEN of Oklahoma, and a good match for BERGER, made rival bids for the votes of the discontented. Senator OWEN tamely proposes the recall of Judges. It is true that he went further than any other proposer of the recall, arguing that the people might discharge a Judge without notice and without reason, showing him less courtesy and consideration than would be shown to an ordinary employé. But Representative BERGER beat the Senator a mile by proposing to dispense with courts and Judges and the Constitution. That really and truly is going some. The Representative proposes to pension everybody who has been a citizen sixteen years, and has reached sixty years of age, and, in order to remove every obstacle to his benevolent intentions, he provides that his statute shall not be submitted to the courts regarding its validity. If necessary, he proposes "to wipe the old Constitution out of existence." Nobody can speak handsomer or bid higher than that.

There is a reminiscence of the Representative's proposal in the legislation of the anti-railway States forbidding the aggrieved railways to take their troubles into court. But that was merely an anti-railway proposal. This is an offer of $4 a week for each vote, including the suffragettes. And to those under sixty or ineligible for pensions is offered the bait of the abolition of the Constitution, which stands in the way of so many good things. This is probably the shortest way to Socialism on the way to anarchy. Is it possible to doubt that we are approaching the good times when property shall be abolished, and we all shall be supported by taxes paid by those who own nothing?

WHAT IS BEER?

In this thirsty weather the Bureau of Chemistry raises an important question. Complaints have been made that consumers find too little beer in their glasses and too much foam. What is beer, and how soon may we legitimately expect to get down to it?

The Egyptians have quaffed the liquor for fifty centuries without once raising this question. Only in this modern era of whys and wherefores, of inspection and introspection, is it asked that the ingredients of the popular beverage be published, together with the conditions of its brewing and sale. Now it has been thought of, there can be no objection.

If consumers are getting five quarts to the gallon of foaming malted extracts, they should know it. What is lager? What is bock? What are ale, porter, and stout? What is "malt extract"? These things should be explained upon the labels. If poisonous chemicals are being dissolved in them, they should be excluded. The Bureau of Chemistry is about to determine whether any of the parts of beer, as brewed, are deleterious. It has the support and moral encouragement of the imbibing public.

THE REMSEN INVESTIGATION.

It is too bad that, because the policy of paring Dr. RUSBY's salary was pursued by officials in the Department of Agriculture, Secretary WILSON's eminent Referee Board of Consulting Scientific Experts should be subjected to an attack on the ground of extravagance in using moneys freely granted to them during their experiments in determining the digestibility of chemical preservatives. President REMSEN of Johns Hopkins, Dr. CHITTENDEN of the Yale Scientific School, and Prof. LONG of Northwestern University are men of high repute. They would not knowingly sanction extravagance. The complaint should not be that they were overpaid, but that Dr. RUSBY was shamefully underpaid, with the intent, it seems, to drive him out of an office in which he was doing a great public good. It is right to complain, moreover, that Dr. WILEY's bolstering up of Dr. RUSBY's salary, with the consent of Secretary WILSON—apparently according to a precedent which permitted the payments to the Remsen Board—ought not to be the basis of a recommendation to remove the chief men in the Bureau of Chemistry.

Some extravagances may be found in the conduct of the Remsen Board's experiments. Subordinates may have gone on junketing trips and may have bought material for useless experiments. If it were shown that, in the important matters for which the Board was created, the Directors failed to direct, that would constitute a grave count in an indictment against the eminent scientists. But the evidence thus far has contained no such disclosure. The "horoscope" item found in the Board's list of expenses should have read "horismascope"; the scientists have been mistakenly ridiculed for providing themselves with an instrument that determines certain qualities of ingested food. It may not have been necessary to buy monkeys and bulldogs and to feed them with sodium benzoate, but, inasmuch as the preservers of foodstuffs are permitted to feed the chemical to the human population of the United States, the charge of "inhuman cruelty" preferred by the anti-vivisectionists against the Remsen Board for its experiments upon animals is hardly justified.

The Congressional investigation is not for the purpose of furnishing weapons in the anti-vivisection crusade. It should proceed at once to determine whether the Remsen Board was legally constituted, and whether the questions it was asked to resolve were adequate. The country wants to know on how slender or how substantial a basis of fact Dr. WILEY's findings against the use of sodium benzoate were overruled by Secretary WILSON.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

A Lesson for the Spoilsmen.

He would indeed be a determined opponent of what spoilsmen, with better reason than they realize, call "civil service," who could criticise for unpracticality or irrelevancy the questions which the candidates for the position of Fire Chief had to answer—or try to answer. In these questions there was nothing about the Second Punic War, the precession of the equinoxes, or the relative methods of SHAKESPEARE and MOLIÈRE. They did not demand essays on fire as a chemical reaction, with incidental rearrangements of atoms and molecules. Instead, the men were asked to tell what they would do if confronted with carefully specified conditions, creating for solution problems of the kind which a Fire Chief may encounter at any hour of the day or night.

Some of them were difficult problems—problems of a difficulty unlike those of pure mathematics in that none of several possible solutions would be of absolute correctness, indubitable by any expert of recognized competency. This fact suggests, and justifies, a query as to whether or not any available examiners, even though they agreed among themselves as to the comparative merits of the papers submitted to them, would necessarily be exactly right in grading the qualifications of the candidates. Of course they would not be, but, assuming their honesty and intelligence, they could not be far wrong, and from such minute mistakes as they might make in the computation of eligibility in decimals the public interests could not appreciably suffer.

This is, we believe, the most important as well as the best paid position that has ever come within civil service rules in any part of the country. It is an office, too, of exactly the sort for which "exemption" has so often been asked and granted on the ground that no examination could be devised which would reveal the qualities, or the lack of qualities, needed for the successful performance of the service required. Yet nobody can seriously doubt that any of the men who passed this examination with credit would make a good Fire Chief, or that the degree of his excellence is vastly more likely to be high than that of a man selected in the old way.

It must be remembered, also, that the preparation for this test was in the very best sense educative of all the men who took it, while a campaign for appointment through the influence of politicians or the favor of friends would have demoralized and degraded every one of them.

Fame Won by a Farmer Boy.

There is a lot of significance and encouragement in the fact that JERRY MOORE, a South Carolina boy of 15, has, by raising 228 bushels of corn on a single acre of land, gained almost as much fame as would have been his had he been a football star at a big university or made a higher batting average than anybody else in a National League. He will not be as loudly cheered, of course, as are the worthies who give soft-muscled thousands an excuse for pretending to be interested in athletic sports, when really they care only for the least important feature of such sports, the winning of games. Still, JERRY MOORE does have his reward, for he is considered something of a personage by official and unofficial exponents of scientific agriculture all over the country, and his corn championship has an intrinsic importance which a good many others lack.

Only too often people are exhorted to get back to the land, regardless of the fact that they wouldn't know what to do with it or themselves after they got there. Until recently about the only teachers they would have found if they went were elderly farmers whose land was in a condition that guaranteed the utter wrongness of any lessons they might give. They were more like miners than farmers, for every crop they raised brought nearer the day when no crops at all could grow on that land, and still more were they like manufacturers who little by little sold their factories instead of using them to turn raw materials into merchandise.

JERRY MOORE, presumably, is or will be a farmer of a different sort. He will not have to whine about "exhausted land," or go to Canada in search of pioneer conditions, where he can stick to the methods of his venerable grandfather and prosper for a time in spite of remote markets. One may well doubt whether he will find it a practicable part of commercial farming to raise 228 bushels of corn to the acre, but undoubtedly he will [illegible] [illegible] and the [illegible] go back to the land [illegible] worth learning. He will tell them, for instance, that the selection of seed is much more than the picking out of pretty specimens, since they may be the scanty product of an unprolific strain, and he may even lecture learnedly on MENDEL's law. If he can understand that, and make others understand it, he will be a wonder indeed.

Can Sign With Propriety.

Mayor GAYNOR needn't hesitate a day, or a minute, for that matter, to sign the bill that authorizes the payment out of city money of the doctors who treated the wound inflicted by a would-be assassin. The delicacy he feels about doing this is comprehensible and creditable, but the obligation was incurred very distinctly in his official, not his individual, capacity, and custom as well as sense warrants the imposing on the community an expense which service of the community has created.

None of the money goes to the Mayor himself, and the bill can hardly be said even to save him money, since his doctors have refused to take pay from him and prefer to get their fees from the city or go without them altogether. We shall know more about the pure, disinterested civicism of that refusal after we hear what they expect the city to give, but that is a question that concerns the Mayor no more than any other citizen. He shouldn't worry about it, and probably will not.

Anyhow, the bill is not "special legislation" for the relief of Mayor GAYNOR; it properly recognizes the existence of a general and continuing peril that hangs over the holder of high office, and does about all that can be done to lighten the burden of apprehension.

CAPT. HARRIS'S INSPECTIONS.

Says He Displeased Steamboat Owners by Insisting on Electrical Insulation.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I have learned through the press that the resignation of Capt. Ira Harris, the Supervising Inspector of Steamboats, District No. 2, has been requested, and I desire, as a citizen and an individual who uses the steamboats under his control, to make a most strenuous protest against this action. I base my protest upon the conditions which existed prior to his incumbency, and the condition of the vessels upon which I have traveled recently. I know why he has become undesirable to some steamboat owners; first, on account of his insisting upon electrical inspection, and any sane man who has the safety of himself and his family at heart will indorse his action in this respect.

Almost as soon as he came into office the Glen Island was burned with nine lives lost. This was due to defective wiring. The Sam Sloan, a sister ship, was examined by Capt. Harris and found to be in a terrible condition. A long stretch of copper wire was entirely uncovered, and in three or four places the insulation was so wet and impaired that it was a wonder she had not been burned. He sent the local inspectors to this vessel and had them make a special report. Three lines of steamers were at once examined and found to be in an equally dangerous condition. Everybody had made the installations. Those on the Glen Island and Sam Sloan had been made ten years before by employes of the company, and had never been examined subsequently. Of the 1,500 vessels in the second district not one had had her electric light system inspected by either insurance people or Government employes. In three months, with the aid of the Board of Trade, the Maritime Exchange and railroad officials, all this was changed, and there was a system of electrical inspection installed, which was the outcome of Capt. Harris's efforts.

Almost all steamboats at the present time are fitted with an electric light service. There are few steamboats that ply even in the smooth waters of the Bay or the Sound in which the vibration will not seriously impair the installation, and there is no doubt that many fires are started through defects in installation due to the vibratory motion of the boat, and Capt. Harris's insistence that periodical inspections of electric installation be made for the safety of the passengers should have been received with appreciation by the general public, instead of denunciation. The many other rulings which he has made, all designed for the safety of those who travel by water, have been prompted by experience and a conscientious sense of duty, and I protest against the retirement of a man whose record in this department has shown nothing but a desire to conserve the safety of those who have been committed to his charge.

PUBLIC SERVICES OF BACHELORS.

Cites the Life of Edward M. Shepard as an Illustration.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The death of Edward M. Shepard brings strongly to mind the irrational attitude toward bachelors. We constantly hear it suggested that bachelors should be taxed, as though they represented a class of delinquents shirking public duties, and might justly be discriminated against. Now, permit me to inquire who is the more useful in this community, a man like Mr. Shepard, who worked hard all his life and devoted his property to public charities, or the man who works hard all his life and devotes his profits (frequently ill-gotten, because he must bring home the money) to the rearing of a family of extravagant daughters, whose chief aim in life is squandering his substance in useless frivolities?

If private property were devoted to proper uses, it would make very little difference who owned it, and we should hear much less of the present clamor for Socialism, which so many members of this community feel is by no means without justification.

The Hat-Checking Brigade.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

For the last five years I have had to patronize the different hotels and cafes for all of my meals, and I, too, wish to enter protest against the nasty little annoyance of the hat-checking brigade. This applies as well to the attendants in the washroom, who are as much of a pest as the Pullman porter, each insisting in begging tips with his germ-laden whiskbroom. It certainly appears cheap for the better class of hotels and cafes to have these human leeches hanging on their customers.

I am informed that the hat-checking privilege is sold by the hotels and cafes to syndicates, which put these pests from under the direct control of the management of the hotels and cafes.

Park Concert Selections Repeated.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

As a regular attendant of the Central Park concerts I would like to ask why certain selections are so frequently played. A glance at the [illegible] issued since the season opened will bear me out when I say that certain pieces have been performed time and time again by the different directors.

Surely Messrs. Volpe et Kaltenborn, who possess or have access to libraries of thousands of pieces, could favor a discriminating public with more variety. As an instance Strauss's "[illegible]" was performed by [illegible] [illegible].

GOV. DIX'S BEACON VETO.

Decries Its Promise of a Uniform Charter for Such Cities.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I have read with some interest your editorial to-day with reference to the veto by Gov. Dix of the commission charter for the proposed City of Beacon. The Governor in his veto suggests that he will recommend to the next Legislature a uniform charter for cities of the third class.

If Gov. Dix can recommend any plan for a uniform charter for cities of the third class it will greatly surprise me. I call your attention to the fact that it has been tried. A commission was named back in the nineties to frame such a charter. It was composed of able and distinguished men, and it spent a lot of time in evolving a proposed charter, which was introduced in the Assembly, I think, in 1896, by Col. William Cary Sanger. Col. Sanger was an enthusiast, but, alas, when a hearing came up on the bill substantially every city of the third class was represented, and every one had most vociferous objections. So impressed was Col. Sanger by the seeming impossibility of uniting these warring elements that he abandoned his bill. In 1905 a joint committee of the Legislature was appointed to prepare a new charter for cities of the second class, of which the writer was a member. The cities to be affected by this proposed law were Rochester, Syracuse, Utica, Schenectady, Albany, Troy, and Yonkers. Here were only seven cities, and yet the differences were such that it was only after much difficulty and the elimination of a great many of the articles proposed that an agreement was finally reached by a report that resulted in a law that pleased nobody, so far as I know, and left a large portion of the internal affairs of each city to be governed by local laws. I became satisfied then, and I am now satisfied, that any attempt at a uniform charter for cities of any class is a humbug pure and simple.

Take the City of Syracuse to-day as an illustration. It is under the second class cities charter, but it has its local laws relating to its government that are so extensive that they constitute a large volume of many hundred pages.

Here is precisely what a uniform charter does: It saddles on the several cities a horde of useless officials with large salaries. It robs them of the great principle of home rule, for amendments to a charter of a class of cities do not have to be submitted to the Mayors and legislative bodies of the several cities affected. I am quite sure that our distinguished Governor has not studied this question with care. If he does, in my opinion, he will abandon once and for all a uniform charter for these fifty or more small cities. When he tries to fit a charter to cities like Binghamton and Elmira with cities like Oneida and Fulton he will begin to discover, I think, that there is not even one thing in common. The idea of a uniform charter for cities of a class is theoretically all right, but practically it is all wrong. There can be general city laws on certain subjects applying to all cities, but when you come to the daily detail of government in a city relating to its officials, their compensation, its paving, its schools, its police, its Fire Department, its public works, and all the other details, let each city procure such laws as it needs. No two cities of this State are alike in any respect, and any attempt to make them alike is like passing a law that oil and water shall mix.

Gov. Dix is proving to be one of the very best and ablest Governors that this State has had in my time, and I hope and trust he will give this uniform charter very close attention before he shall recommend something that will simply be an affliction.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Several of your correspondents lately in their communications concerning the railway accident at Bridgeport have spoken of the engineer being "lost," that is, not knowing where he was, and they are frank enough to say they do not attempt to explain it, though believing it. If they will read up a little on the various phases of psychologic action, so to speak, they will learn that experts have discovered that being "lost," in a very great many instances, is psychical rather than physical; in other words, that the individual is not lost in body but in mind.

Scarcely a person in this city, I suppose, who reads this but will recall that he has at times experienced a peculiar lapse of memory, or mind, when getting out at an "L" or a Subway station, and though in a familiar neighborhood has stopped on the street for a half minute or more to locate himself. Landmarks which he has seen dozens of times are no longer familiar, and sometimes he must walk around for a minute or more before he gets his bearings. In the woods the same peculiar lapse of memory will occur, and whereas one minute the person is going right, in an instant his mental gear seems to slip a cog, and he doesn't know where he is. Of course people frequently are physically "lost," but this occurs only in wholly unfamiliar localities and is easily explicable. What the other is, beyond that it is said to be psychical, is not yet fully determined.

THE MAN OF THE HOUR.

'T happened once upon a time, not very long ago,
The fans read in the papers, as the fans
will do, y' know,
That the Giants 'd bought a pitcher who had pitched himself to fame
'Way out in the wild and woolly where the Rubes acquire a name.
"Rube" was this man's first handle,
and Marquard was the last,
And when the news flashed homeward
the fans were all aghast;
They said they liked the story, but 'twas a bit too strong,
A cool 'leven thousand dollars! sure something must be wrong.
They thought the baseball writers were pulling off some stuff,
Some few thought wise old John McGraw had thrown a little bluff;
Some didn't think much either way, but wanted to be shown,
And waited till perched in the box they'd see the great unknown.

And so the Rube came into town and one day went to pitch,
And—here's where complications start,
where matters took a hitch.
For Rube was wild, oh, very wild! It really was a shame:
He hit the batsmen, they hit him: the Giants lost the game.
This happened more than once, 'tis said—
alas, it happened oft,
Whene'er the Rube went in to pitch the batters found him soft.
Sometimes he'd strike a few men out,
but as a rule he'd walk 'em,
And if they didn't get on base that way he'd simply turn and balk 'em.
The fans, as fans will, knocked poor
Rube, and said he was a frost,
Whene'er he'd get a chance to pitch they'd count the game as lost,
And John McGraw, so we were told, was suff'ring from blue funks,
And fretting o'er the Rube's poor stuff and the club's 11,000 plunks.

But, O ye fans, what things have come to pass 'twixt then and now!
When nowadays the Rube goes in he makes the batters bow
And bend their backs and hit the air, and makes 'em think they're batty,
And that when they've just knocked the spots out of our peerless Matty.
And so the Rube has won the day 'gainst
all knocks indicated,
The $11,000 beauty's worth's been amply vindicated.
The Rube has won 'most twenty games,
and lost but two or three,
Which is some record as things go, as most folks will agree.
And so just take your hammer in, all
Rube's hand work the squeeze,
Oil up your voice, throw up your hat—
Hail, Richard de Marquis.

FIRST POSTAL [illegible] OPENED IN THIS CI

Only Residents of This Borough and the Bronx Allowed to Become Depositors.

IN GENERAL POST OFFICE

Start Shows Its Popularity, 160 Accounts Having Been Opened During Banking Hours.

The first Government savings bank in New York City was opened yesterday morning in the Money Order Division of the General Post Office. At 5 o'clock, when the first day's business ended, there had been about 160 depositors, who placed in the hands of the Government amounts ranging from $1 to $100. The desire to make deposits on the part of the people of Manhattan and the Bronx, to whom this first bank is restricted, was greater than had been expected. When the doors were opened at 9 o'clock forty persons were in line at the receiving window. The receiving teller was busy all day. When the bank closed there were a dozen who were turned away with the advice to return the next day.

There was a brisk contest for the distinction of being the first New Yorker to obtain one of the new savings certificates. This honor fell to Clarence A. Parks of 1,331 Intervale Avenue, the Bronx, who pushed a two-dollar bill under the grating and a moment later received a large manila envelope containing a certificate, No. B323,001, issue of 1911. In view of this achievement, Mr. Parks was photographed for the newspapers, and his two-dollar certificate was reproduced.

The process of receiving deposits and issuing certificates went on all day at the rate of sixteen an hour. The money order room in the rear of the second floor of the Post Office was temporarily demoralized. The line obstructed the paying window for foreign money orders and the inquiry window. Some of the clerks went on the outside and acted as guides to bewildered patrons.

In the line at 4 o'clock when the window closed were two messenger boys in uniform, two women, two boys, who appeared to be about twelve, noticeably clean, and neatly dressed; a Greek, an Italian, one large man in shirt sleeves, who might have been a butcher, and the rest were young men who would naturally be taken for clerks and office workers.

Several men of Brooklyn and New Jersey were turned away with the explanation that the bank was only for Manhattan and the Bronx. Two men appeared during the day with a thousand dollars each for deposit. Great was their dismay when they were told that the Government would not accept more than $100 in any one month from any one individual, and that no account for more than $500 could be held. The argument of one that he could send $1,000 to the Italian Postal Savings Bank and have it accepted did not interest the busy clerks behind the windows.

Printed slips giving the rules of the bank were handed out by the attendants in the room. Notable provisions were pointed out, such as the rule that only individuals can open accounts. There can be no joint accounts and no corporation or partnership accounts. All accounts are strictly private. No person connected with the Post Office is allowed to disclose the name or the amount of the deposit of any patron of the bank. A married woman's account is held in her own name and free from any interference or control by her husband. Interest is paid at the rate of 2 per cent., and is not compounded. Certificates may be exchanged for Postal Savings bonds in denominations of $20, $40, $60, $80, $100, and multiples of $100, which draw interest at the rate of 2½ per cent.

The first postal bank in this State was opened at Cohoes on Jan. 3, 1911. On the same day one bank in each State in the Union was opened for business. Yesterday banks were opened in several of the largest cities in the country—Chicago, St. Louis, and Boston being designated by the Postmaster General. [illegible] Brooklyn will have a bank [illegible] Post Office Building in Washington Street.

Postmaster Morgan [illegible] he thought the next few days would [illegible] such a rush of depositors [illegible]. The desire of depositors [illegible] interest for the full month of [illegible], he thought, would account for [illegible] yesterday, in addition to the appeal of the novelty of the bank.

With the [illegible] there were only a few errors to mar the smooth operation of their busy day. Somebody wrote "Hannah" for "Anna" and caused a flurry before the person with the name could be found and the error could be corrected. The nature of the clerical work, said Mr. Morgan, made it impossible to put many clerks to work at once. It was handled yesterday by two men. In charge of the new bank is Joseph Elliott, Superintendent of the Money Order Division.

POSTAL BANK IN CHICAGO.

$4,000 of Savings Deposited with Government on First Day.

CHICAGO, Aug. 1.—Chicago's first postal savings bank was opened for business to-day and $4,000 was deposited during the day. A line of 200 depositors stood in front of the new bank in the east wing of the Post Office Building when it was formally opened by Postmaster Campbell and his assistants. Some of the depositors came from towns far outside of Chicago.

The first depositor was Michael Phelan, a boy, who stood in line nine hours and deposited $5. He was followed by Adeline O'Grady, 12 years old, who deposited $1. During the first hour deposits aggregating $1,000 were received. Several Chicago bankers were interested spectators, and they expressed the opinion that the postal savings bank would draw patrons principally from those who would not put money in a private bank.

The Lincoln Memorial.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Those favoring a public competition for the selection of a Lincoln Memorial should remember that no artist whose work has a definite market value, (that is, whose talent has been recognized by a large number of more or less competent persons,) can afford to "compete." Out of 100 possible models submitted only one will be accepted, however perfect the other 99 may be. What will the 99 disappointed competitors do with their Lincolns, on which they may have expended much valuable time? Who wants a Lincoln, especially a Lincoln of crumbling and cracked modeling clay?

Have you ever heard of any well-known writer taking part in a short-story contest?

BATHHOUSE ORATORY, BUT NO OPENING

Big Crowd Disappointed When Waved Away from Doors of Municipal Baths at Coney.

OFFICIALS ONLY ADMITTED

These and a Few Choice Friends Allowed to See Inside—Aquatic Sports Likewise Disappoint.

The long-looked-for official opening of the city's $500,000 bathhouse at Coney Island took place yesterday, but the occasion was marred considerably because the bathhouse was not completed, so there could be no real opening at all. No one except the officials was allowed to see the inside of the building. The oratory seemed to lack sincerity because the bath house was not a reality, and some of the water events which had been so widely advertised and which a crowd of several hundred thousand persons had assembled to witness, did not materialize. The police had their hands so full, taking note of the complaints attending the "opening" ceremonies, that it was generally said before the afternoon was over that Coney Island was rarely more disorderly than on this occasion of the bathhouse celebration.

Early in the day the series of festivities began with a parade, headed by a squad of mounted police and the police band. In the line of march were about 300 "white wings," followed by the youths of St. Joseph's Orphan Asylum and its band, and a similar company from the Hebrew Orphan Asylum. Sandwiched in between were the inevitable elephants and ponies from Luna Park, not to forget the Indians and cowboys from the Wild West show on the island.

The paraders marched from West Seventeenth Street to the new bathhouse at Fifth Street and Surf Avenue, where a reviewing stand and a speakers' platform had been erected. Congressman William Calder opened the ceremonies with a talk about baths in general, followed by Borough President Steers, who limited himself to a discussion of Coney Island baths in particular. When he formally turned over the new building to Controller Prendergast the crowd cheered, and asked to be admitted to the much-eulogized building.

Others on the speakers' stand were Howard Woody, Superintendent of Buildings for Brooklyn, and Alderman Alexander S. Drescher, who was introduced as the "father of the bathhouse," but whose platform speech came to a sudden end when the crowd got uneasy and further demanded admittance to the new municipal beach, where all were to be welcomed at the rate of 10 cents a head.

Adjournment was made, consequently, to the new building, concerning which all the speakers had addressed their remarks, and there was a mad rush by some of the men to be the first to don a municipal bathing suit.

But the crowd was doomed to disappointment, for in front of the five entrances to the new building there stood eight attendants, who waved the crowd back and gave notice that no one but officials were allowed to enter. Even reporters, who had come prepared to do justice to the interior arrangements and decorations, were shooed away. All of the officials and their personal friends entered, and then the five gates were closed.

In a statement credited to Superintendent of Buildings Woody recently it was stated that the new building would be completed within a week and that half of the lockers were already in place and ready for use. According to Daniel Garber, President of the North Eastern Construction Company, which is in charge of the construction of the new baths, however, it turns out that in reality only 400 lockers on the ground floor were finished, and that no lockers had yet been installed on either the second or the third floors. Mr. Garber further said that the building would not be completed for one or two months.

Just how the officials spent their time or were entertained within the building could not be learned, but one of the attendants on a tour of inspection after the officials and their favored friends had again filed out, discovered that the freshly laid cement floors on the third floor were a mess of footprints. The floor was in such bad condition, he said, that everything would have to be done over again.

Water sports on the beach front was the next scheduled attraction, and this drew the largest crowd of the day. The first event was that of a fireboat advancing toward the beach with fourteen streams of water shooting from its sides and ends at one time. The firemen did not disappoint the beach squatters and made good the boast that such a thing could be done. Of the other nine scheduled events, however, less of praise can be said. For the lifesaving exhibition there were no entrants and the score keeper called off the next event, called a high-diving contest.

There was a delay in the proceedings at this point and a boy approached the judges' stand with the sad news that the diving pedestal had been accidentally knocked down by one of the official committee's boats, necessitating the elimination of this event altogether.

For event No. 4 on the programme, a canoe tilting contest, there were no entrants.

Event No. 5 was a duck hunting contest. Alas, it had been impossible to buy a live duck in the neighborhood and the committee announced that that event had to be struck off.

No. 6 was a 100-yard free-for-all swim for women only. Elaine Golding and Helen Porray, both of Bath Beach, were the sole contestants, however, and they were awarded first and second prize, respectively. The judges in their excitement forgot to take the time on this event, and again the crowd good-naturedly cheered. Then it developed that more women had not entered the contest because no accommodations had been accorded them to change clothes. The two women who did venture to take a municipal bath, it is said, dressed behind an American flag which was hung in front of one of the unfinished beach entrances to the bathhouse.

The next event, also the last, was a mile swim for men. Two of the entrants, Paul Webb of 2,205 Cropsey Avenue, and Emerson Dietrich of 8,642 Twenty-second Avenue, had changed clothes inside the new bathhouse and had received the use of one of the lockers on the ground floor. When they left the bathhouse there was an attendant in charge, but when they returned there was none, and with his disappearance went the keys to the lockers.

When the attendant was finally found sunning himself on the beach and the lockers had been opened Webb discovered that all of his money and a diamond pin valued at $50 had been stolen from his locker. The other swimmer found that his money and a diamond ring valued at [illegible] were missing. The two swimmers went to the Coney Island Police Station and [illegible] the first complaint against the new municipal bathhouse.

In the evening there was a dinner at [illegible]'s Ocean Walk Restaurant, attended by about 100 officials and friends. [illegible] Pound was toastmaster, and among the speakers were Alderman Drescher, Borough President McAneny, and Controller Prendergast.

PUTNAM WED IN SECRET.

Rhodes Scholar, Who Helped Oxford Win Events, Brings Bride Home.

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, Mass., Aug. 1.—George E. Putnam, the Rhodes scholar from Kansas, whose points for Oxford won the recent meet between Oxford-Cambridge and Harvard-Yale teams, arrived in Boston this afternoon on the steamship Canadian with a bride he took five days before the intercollegiate games.

Mrs. Putnam was Miss Claire Edwards of New Orleans. They were married secretly in order that the announcement of the marriage would not affect the young man's entry in the games. They left to-night for New York. From there they will go to Richmond, Kan., Mr. Putnam's home.

Putnam has received an appointment as an instructor of economics in the University of Kansas.

MORRIS—DUFFY.

Mrs. Ella Bingham Duffy and Dr. Lewis Morris, U. S. N., were married very quietly yesterday at the home of Mrs. Duffy's mother, Mrs. Jacob Willard Bingham, in this city. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. William A. Courtney, rector of St. Brendan's Church, assisted by the Rev. Matthew G. Gleason, U. S. N., Chaplain at the Brooklyn Navy Yard. There was no reception, owing to the recent illness of Mrs. Bingham.

When Dr. and Mrs. Morris return from a motoring trip they will reside in New York. Dr. Morris lives at present at 46 East Forty-first Street.

CROWD AT "POP" CONCERT.

Schenck Symphony Programme Pleases on the Century Roof.

The Elliott Schenck Orchestra gave the fourth symphony programme in the "Pop" concert series on the roof of the Century Theatre last night before a large audience. The movements from "The New World" symphony of Dvorak—the adagio allegro molto and the largo—were well rendered. The programme included also Wagner's "Kaiser March," the prize song from "Die Meistersinger," and several lighter numbers.

To-night will be the first Russian night, the first half of the programme being selected from the works of Tschaikowsky, Borodin, Chopin, and Moszkowsky. Mrs. Charlotte von Skibinsky, a Russian pianist, will be heard in solos.

A CAT THAT CROWS.

You May Doubt It, but It's a Civic Problem in East Orange.

If crowing hens always come to some bad end, why not crowing cats? asks East Orange, N. J., querulously. It was bad enough when the roosters tuned up in the middle of the night and shortened the sleep snatched between trains by the tired commuters. But East Orange passed an ordinance telling the roosters they mustn't, and after a while it did seem as if the fowl were quieting down. Perhaps it was because the neighbors got in the habit of strangling to death the ones that were inclined to summon the dawn ahead of time.

Now Health Inspector Bowman is prostrated by the announcement from an East Orangeman that a cat, mendaciously maybe, has learned the trick of imitating the rooster's blast. This performance, Bowman has been informed, is so successful that the roosters themselves are deceived, and, waking up at the inviting sound, lend their voices to a general choir.

Bowman is not sure just what steps he will take. Perhaps he will arrange for a catcatcher to accompany the dogcatcher. Perhaps he will discharge the dogcatcher, and leave the undisturbed dogs to settle the little matter of the cat. There really is no telling what Bowman will do.

MISS QUIMBY WINS AIR PILOT LICENSE

First Woman in America and Second in World Authorized to Fly Aeroplane.

NEAR LANDING RECORD

After One Failure She Came to Earth Within Seven Feet of Mark—De Murias Also Licensed.

Special to The New York Times.

GARDEN CITY, L. I., Aug. 1.—Miss Harriet Quimby won to-day the first pilot's license ever issued to a woman by the Aero Club of America, and the second ever earned anywhere by a woman. Miss Quimby's predecessor is Mme. Dutrie of France. In her trial for the license Miss Quimby created what is probably a world's record for contestants for pilot's licenses by landing within 7 feet 9 inches of a given mark. Her figures are close to the world's record for experienced aviators as well, the official mark being 5 feet 4 inches by the late Ralph Johnstone in a Wright biplane at Squantum, Mass., on last Sept. 8, though Tom Sopwith, the English aviator flying at Nassau Boulevard in a Howard-Wright biplane, is credited with having landed recently within a foot of the mark.

Miss Quimby is a pupil at the Moisant Aviation School here, and won her license in a Moisant monoplane. Her success assisted in establishing a record for the school; also, for Ferdinand De Murias, another pupil, earned his license this morning.

The successful trial of to-day was Miss Quimby's second attempt to join the ranks of licensed fliers. Last night she performed the series of five figure eights, but slipped up when it came to landing within 100 feet of the mark. She forgot to shut off her engine and after striking the ground in an advantageous position she was swept 40 feet beyond the mark by her engine. Miss Quimby was almost in tears because her failure in this trial necessitated a repetition of the whole feat. She declared, however, that she would repeat the attempt at 4:30 o'clock this morning. J. C. Campbell-Wood, Secretary of the Aero Club of America, and Baron D'Orcy, the official observers, agreed to be on the field at this time.

But day broke with a heavy haze over the Hempstead Plains. It was a haze which was more truly a fog, and at 4:30 o'clock it was apparent that the trials could not be held. Miss Quimby insisted that the sun would burn the haze away, and finally persuaded every one to wait. Her skill as a weather prophet was vindicated at 6 o'clock when the sun managed to work through the mist, and there was every promise of a speedy clearing. Miss Quimby had her monoplane wheeled from the hangar, and it was not much after 6 o'clock when she gave the word to release her craft.

The young woman rose quickly to a height of about 150 feet and started on her five circuits of the pylons, round which she was required to alternate in right and left turns. She banked her craft prettily at the turns and soon had accomplished the first test, the one which she had performed last night.

Then she had tried immediately to land beside the mark. This time, warned by her failure of last night, she came to earth, let her motor cool, and then ascending again, dropped within seven feet nine inches of the mark. She had been extremely nervous over this part of the test, but with what is probably her record to cheer her on, she quickly swung through another series of figure eights and again alighted within the required 150 feet.

There remained then only the altitude test between her and a pilot's license, and, as throughout the earlier tests she had been flying close to the altitude mark of 164 feet, this had no terrors for the young woman. She swung aloft in a series of spirals, and then dropped easily to earth after her barograph had recorded 220 feet.

Miss Quimby wore the conventional aviator's garb of brown shirt and trousers, close-fitting skull cap, and goggles. Her face was covered with grease and dirt, but her blue eyes flashed happily as she greeted the official observers with the remark:

"Well, I guess I get that license."

"I guess you do," was the response, and without waiting for further congratulations, Miss Quimby hurried off to change into her usual garments in time to view De Murias's attempt.

The latter's monoplane had been pushed down the field, and he was about to start when W. G. Beattie, a pupil of Al Welch in the Wright school at Nassau Boulevard, was sighted in the distance coming over for a visit. Beattie had a mechanician with him, though as yet he hasn't tried for a pilot's license. He swept over the field, but instead of landing at a distance headed directly for the middle of the field, where Miss Quimby's machine still stood, and where Miss Mathilda Moisant, a sister of Alfred Moisant and the late John Moisant, was preparing to mount into a monoplane for a lesson. Near the two machines was a big group of oil cans.

As Beattie came earthward it was evident that he intended to try to land between the two machines and the oil cans, where there was scarcely room for his craft. He couldn't be stopped, however, and an instant later struck the ground, ran forward, and crashed into the tail of Miss Moisant's machine, wrecking its rudder and putting it out of business for the day. Neither Beattie nor his mechanician were hurt, though his own machine received a damaged left wing.

De Murias seized the opportunity immediately after Beattie's landing to get away on his trials, for presently there began to arrive other visitors from the Aeronautical Society sheds at the other end of the field. They were Lee Hammond in a Baldwin biplane and Dr. H. M. Walden in a monoplane of his own manufacture, which looks like a Demoiselle, the smallest monoplane made. Presently, too, Al Welch came flying over to look for Mr. Beattie, so that as De Murias finished his test there were four machines hovering over Hempstead Plains at once.

ENGLISH AVIATOR KILLED.

Wind Dashes Germal Napier's Airship to Ground—Passenger Escapes.

LONDON, Aug. 1.—Germal Napier, a young English aviator, was killed this evening while flying with a passenger at Brooklands.

Mr. Napier was driving a biplane, and a sudden gust of wind dashed the machine to the ground, killing him instantly. His companion was thrown clear of the wreck and escaped uninjured.

TO FLY TO PHILADELPHIA.

Three Must Follow a Stated Course—$5,000 to the Winner.

Charles K. Hamilton, Lincoln Beachey, and Hugh Robinson of the staff of the Curtiss Exhibition Company of Hammondsport, N. Y., will start from here on Saturday in an attempt to fly to Philadelphia, at the start and finish passing over the stores of Gimbel Brothers, who have offered a $5,000 prize to the man first accomplishing the feat. The flight has been changed from the original plan by requiring that each flier follow the same course.

The men will leave Governors Island, pass over the Gimbel store, and cross the Hudson. Then they plan to follow the Pennsylvania Railroad tracks to Trenton, whence they will follow the Delaware River to Philadelphia, passing over the store there and alighting on Belmont Plateau. Each flier will carry messages which will be dropped along the route.

The flight will be the first in which fliers have had to follow a given route. Disqualification will follow the report that any flier had deviated from the proposed course.

ATWOOD CIRCLES BALTIMORE.

Also Makes Flight Over Buildings of Maryland City.

BALTIMORE, Aug. 1.—Harry N. Atwood at 6 o'clock this evening ascended in a Wright biplane from Prospect Park, several miles southeast of this city, flew to the centre of the city, circled over the skyscrapers, made a complete circuit of the city, and returned to the park thirty-two minutes later, having covered an estimated distance of 22 miles.

There was no monetary consideration involved in the flight, Atwood having announced that for the sport's sake he would try to outdo the feat of Hubert Latham, who flew over Baltimore last November for a prize offered by a newspaper.

Atwood made four circles around the park until he reached an altitude of about 1,500 feet, when he started for the city. Over the city he maintained an altitude of about 3,000 feet. When he alighted from his machine he was seized and carried around the field on the shoulders of spectators.

EDWIN A. ABBEY, PAINTER, DIES AT 59

American Artist Succumbs in London to Effects of Operation for Liver Trouble.

MANY BRITISH EULOGIES

He Painted the Coronation of King Edward, but Refused to Paint King George's.

LONDON, Aug. 1.—Edwin A. Abbey, the American painter, died here at 1 o'clock this afternoon.

He was in his sixtieth year.

Little was known publicly regarding Mr. Abbey's illness. It was not until a day or two ago that it was known his condition was serious, following an operation for liver trouble, which he underwent about a month ago. It is now stated that he appeared to be recovering from the surgery, but a few days ago he suffered a relapse, after which he slowly sank.

The afternoon papers print extended obituaries of Mr. Abbey. All speak most flatteringly of his talent as a great colorist and rare draughtsman, and saying that he was unexcelled by any living painter in rendering medieval subjects.

Mr. Abbey was so successful with his picture of the coronation of King Edward that he was invited to paint the coronation of King George, but declined. He explained that he had suffered much trouble and annoyance in completing the first work. King Edward and Queen Alexandra had shown every consideration, he said, but others of lesser rank were most exasperating in their lack of punctuality, and failure to keep their engagements, and at the same time so vain that they exhausted the patience of the artist.

The funeral will be held at 3 o'clock on Thursday afternoon at the Kingsbury Old Church, near Willesden. The body will be cremated and buried at Kingsbury.

Edwin A. Abbey's first successes were achieved as an illustrator for the periodicals and a painter of water colors. It was not until after he had taken up his residence in London, in 1878, that he discovered the true bent of his genius. His works in water colors and oils have since attracted attention both in this country and Europe. One of his greatest achievements of this later and more ambitious period is the series of fifteen large mural paintings illustrating "The Quest of the Holy Grail," painted in 1895. They were on exhibition at the Guildhall, London, for a time, and have since been placed at the Boston Public Library. Mr. Abbey won more fame when he was commissioned to paint the scene of the coronation of King Edward VII. of England in 1903-1904. This great canvas was one of his most admirable works.

Mr. Abbey had spent six years in executing eight immense pictures for the decoration of the dome of the Capitol of Pennsylvania, at Harrisburg, and at his death had completed about half the work, for which he received the commission in 1902. These four pictures were painted at Morgan Hall, his estate at Gloucestershire, England. Of the eight canvases the four largest are lunettes designed to be placed under the collar of the dome. They represent Science revealing "The Treasures of the Earth," "The Spirit of Light," "The Spirit of Religious Liberty," and "The Spirit of Vulcan, the Genius of the Workers in Iron and Steel."

The other canvases, smaller in size, are circular, and bear figures representing Religion, Science, Law, and Art, with appropriate inscriptions. The completed canvases were exhibited in the East Gallery of the University of London in April, 1908, and artists and admirers of decorative art flocked there in great numbers to view them. The artist received the congratulations of many distinguished masters, and there were not a few who expressed the opinion that the works marked a distinct advance over his paintings "The Quest of the Holy Grail." In December, 1908, Mr. Abbey gave to the State of Pennsylvania ten mural paintings to be placed in the hall of the House of Representatives of the Capitol.

Mr. Abbey was born in Philadelphia on April 1, 1852, the son of Roswell Abbey, a prosperous merchant, who also possessed the artistic temperament and used to spend many hours before his easel. Edwin Abbey was barely 4 years old when he began to make pencil sketches which attracted more than passing attention. The first of his drawings to be published were for the late Oliver Optic's paper, Our Boys and Girls, and appeared in 1866, when young Abbey was but 14 years old. Two years later Mr. Abbey went into a wood engraver's shop and drew on wood, and it was about this time that his sketch portraying a band of Puritans celebrating "The First Thanksgiving" appeared in Harper's. He counted it as one of the proudest moments of his whole career, and often spoke of it as such.

After that success Abbey studied for about a year in the Pennsylvania Academy of Fine Arts, Philadelphia, where he was known as "a good artist but unwilling." When he came to New York, two years later, however, he quickly began to develop, and soon rose to be the favorite illustrator in black and white for both books and periodicals.

His methods were especially adapted to the interpretation of the quiet idyls of old-time country life and to portrayals of the beruffled, gaily dressed cavaliers and dames in quilted petticoats, typical of eighteenth-century England. His first successes were won by illustrations to Herrick's poems and Goldsmith's comedies. He also produced important canvases in his Shakespearean illustrations to critical text supplied by Andrew Lang. Mr. Abbey was famed among artists as the profession's most pronounced stickler for correct costumes and settings for his work.

When Mr. Abbey leased Morgan Hall, his English country home, an old, rambling structure, parts of which are 300 years old, he altered it right and left, decorating and embellishing it. It was to Morgan Hall that numerous members of royalty and many persons of title journeyed in order to pose in their robes of state for the coronation painting.

Among Mr. Abbey's most famous semi-historical pictures are "Richard, Duke of Gloucester, and the Lady Anne," (1896;) "Hamlet," (1897,) and "King Lear's Daughters," (1898.) His best-known portraits are those in water colors of Andrew Carnegie, J. W. Harper, and R. G. Dun.

Mr. Abbey lived abroad constantly for some twenty-four years, and it was Europe which first gave him marked attention as a worker in water colors and oils. He was elected a member of the Royal Institute of Painters in 1883 and a member of the Royal Academy of England in 1896. He won a second-class medal at the Paris Exposition of 1883 and a first-class medal at the Paris Exposition of 1889. His paintings have been a feature of scores of exhibitions in this country and abroad. In May, 1908, he was elected a corresponding member of the Academie des Beaux Arts, after contributing to an exhibition. "A May Day Morning," his first picture exhibited at the Royal Academy at London, attracted much attention.

Mr. Abbey was a Chevalier of the Legion d'Honneur, a member of the National Academy of Design of New York, a corresponding member of the Institut de France, President of the Artists' Cricket Club, and an honorary member of the American Institute of Architects, the Royal Bavarian Academy, and the Madrid Society of Artists.

The Yankees shattered the hoodoo which has been robbing them of double-headers all season and sailed into the White Sox on the Hilltop yesterday with such vim and dash that they carried off two victories, the first game by a score of 4 to 3 and the second by a count of 8 to 2. Chase's men shook off the drowsiness which has made them easy victims of the Sox in the present series and turned the tables on the Comiskey troop. They hammered the peerless Ed Walsh at the proper time in the first game, while Roy Caldwell worked smoothly and had the White Sox swinging wildly at his accurately directed curves And not only that, but he won his own game with a timely hit in the ninth inning.

Russell Ford pitched the Yanks to victory in the second game, although he was far from being at his best. He was constantly pitching himself into trouble, but was strong enough to emerge several times without much damage. Young Cy Young was wild in this game and gave way in the seventh inning to Hovlik, but the game was lost then, and there was no need of a rescue crew.

Hemphill was in centre field in place of Daniels, and was a powerful factor in the first victory. Charley performed like a youngster. He scored the Yanks' first run in the fourth inning after beating out an infield hit, scoring on Cree's two-bagger. In the sixth inning Charley smashed a clean home run between right and centre fields for the Yankees' second run. This wallop staggered Walsh and Cree banged out a single. Walsh made a wild toss to first base to catch Birdie napping, and Cree went around to third base, scoring on Hartzell's single.

The Sox threatened trouble in the eighth inning and continued the rally into the ninth, until they tied up the score. Tannehill opened the eighth with a double. Dougherty, batting for Sullivan, was an easy out at first base, Tannehill going to third on the play. He scored on Walsh's out at first base. In the ninth inning Lord filed to Chase and Callahan walked, McIntyre drove a triple to right, scoring Callahan. Ping Bodie struck out. Zeider's red-hot single bounded off Gardner's shins and McIntyre scored, tying the count. Zeider was out stealing second.

Undismayed at this turn of affairs, the Yankees won out at the last minute. Hartzell singled and Knight was hit in the shoulder. Gardner banged a grounder to Walsh, who swung around and threw to Lord to cut off Hartzell at third base. Roy slid in feet first and apparently beat the ball, but Umpire Mullin called him out. Daniels, who was coaching at third base, protested and was put out of the game. Hartzell mildly objected, also and Mullin sent him to the clubhouse, too. From the stands it looked as if Hartzell reached third base ahead of the ball, and the 10,000 spectators didn't hesitate to tell Mullin their decision on the play. They didn't agree at all with Mullin's decision.

Blair was the second out. Walsh to Zeider. Caldwell then walked up and coolly won his own game with a rap to centre which sent Knight in with the deciding run.

The second game was easier than the first one for the Yankees. They got the jump on the Sox in the first inning and jogged on ahead as they pleased. As in the first game, Hemphill and Cree played an important part with their bats. Hartzell's banishment kept him out of the second game, so Knight went to third, and Magner, the diminutive shortstop from Cornell, played at short. The midget proceeded at once to win his way into the popularity of the fans by his fast fielding and timely batting. A singing smash to [illegible] in the first inning sent over two [illegible] and made Magner's social standing [illegible] with the inhabitants.

[illegible] was wabbly at the start and [illegible] Wolter. Chase tore a hot one [illegible] Lord, and Hemphill fanned. [illegible] stole second and scored on Cree's [illegible]. A wild pitch sent Birdie to third, [illegible] Knight drew a pass. Then Magner [illegible] the ball to centre and sent Cree [illegible] across. In the fourth inning [illegible] their only damage of the [illegible] Lord had bounced a hopper [illegible] glove, Jimmy Callahan poked [illegible] the dark corner of left field, [illegible] bounded from one fence to the [illegible] a billiard ball. Jimmy scam[illegible] the way home with Lord ahead [illegible] run through them on Chase [illegible] Hemphill's triple and Cree's two-bagger gave the Yankees two more runs. Young's finish came in the seventh inning, when singles by Wolter and Hemphill, Sweeney's two-bagger, and a pass gave three more runs. The eighth run was tacked up in the ninth inning, when Wolter walked for the third time and was sacrificed by Chase. Wolter dashed all the way to third on the sacrifice, a la Cobb. He scored on Cree's single through third base.

TURNING OF THE WORM.

The Yankees are the best in-and-outers in captivity. They can drop lower one day and jump higher the next than any team in the league.

Yankee rooters showed their loyalty yesterday to better advantage than they have on some other occasions when the team was in a slump. A crowd of 10,000 was there yesterday making a noise.

Ping Bodie was quite tame and didn't break a board in the fence.

A foul from Cree's bat put Catcher Payne's thumb out of business in the second game. The last time Washington was here he crippled Street and Ainsmith. Birdie is tough on catchers.

It pleased a lot of people to see Old Charley Hemphill come back and play such a fine game. Hemphill has set on the bench for some time and has seen some playing that couldn't compare with his capers yesterday.

Zeider made a double error in the third inning. He not only dropped Walsh's throw, but made a wild heave to second, which sent Wolter home.

It took half a dozen Sox about five minutes to run Wolter and Hemphill up and down the base lines in the first inning before they made a double play.

Here comes Cleveland with Joe Jackson and Ole Olson, the demon stars of the crew.

Hughes Triumphs Over Gregg.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 1.—Elberfeld's triple and Gessler's single enabled Hughes to triumph over Gregg to-day, Washington beating Cleveland for the fourth straight time, 1 to 0. Feature catches were made by Lajoie, Walker, and Ball. The score:

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 1.—Detroit hit the ball hard here to-day, piling up seventeen hits for a total of thirty-one bases, and winning by 13 to 6. The visitors landed on Coombs for nine hits, which included a double, three triples, and a home run, and drove him off the rubber in the second inning. Martin, who succeeded Coombs, was also hit hard. Danforth, a "southpaw," formerly of Baler College, Texas, pitched the ninth inning in good style. Philadelphia had a batting rally in the third inning, and drove out four doubles and a single off Summers, but a sensational one-hand catch by Bush off Oldring resulted in a double play, and kept the score down. Lapp had his finger hurt in the eighth inning, and was forced to leave the game. The score:

Brooklyn Club Fined $50.

CINCINNATI, Ohio, Aug. 1.—Because officers of the Brooklyn National League Baseball Club gave Pitcher Ragon permission to play in an exhibition game at Long Branch, N. J., on July 16 the club was fined $50 by the National Baseball Commission to-day. The rule under which this action was taken was made in the first place at the instance of President Ebbets of Brooklyn. It provides that National agreement players may appear only with the clubs holding their contracts, and was promulgated to prevent independent teams from obtaining major leaguers as attractions in opposition to regularly scheduled games.

MAGEE CASE HEARING.

National League Directors Hear Story of Player Who Assaulted Umpire.

CHICAGO, Aug. 1.—Directors of the National Baseball League, after spending the day considering the appeal of Outfielder Sherwood Magee of Philadelphia, who was suspended for an attack on Umpire Finneran, consumed a considerable portion of the night without deciding Magee's fate. After hearing numerous witnesses during the day the board resumed its investigation to-night, and after several hours' discussion seemed no nearer an agreement than at the dinner adjournment. The air of mystery and secrecy which accompanied the day session was maintained at night, and members of the board declined to discuss the case. President Lynch, however, denied a rumor which gained ground that Magee was to be reinstated after an elaborate apology to Finneran.

Magee's teammates on the Philadelphia team, who had tarried here, expecting to be called as witnesses, but who had cooled their hot heels all day in the hotel lobbies without being sent for, departed for Cincinnati at 9 o'clock to-night. Soon afterward Finneran and Umpire Rigler, who had officiated with Finneran on July 10 when the disturbance in the field took place, left for St. Louis, where they will officiate to-morrow.

DONLIN SOLD TO BOSTON.

Giants' Former Slugger and Captain Bought by President Russell.

PITTSBURG, Aug. 1.—Following a conference here to-night between President Russell of the Boston National League team and Manager McGraw of the New York National Club, announcement was made that "Mike" Donlin had been sold to the Boston club. The sale was outright, no other players figuring. The price was not stated.

Mike Donlin, formerly Captain and outfielder for the Giants, retired from the game in 1908 to go into vaudeville. He rejoined the Giants this season, and has been used as pinch hitter. In a game at the Polo Grounds recently Donlin proved that he has some of his old-time hitting ability when he put the ball into the right field stand for a home run. His baseball career starts back many years ago in Pennsylvania. Then he played ball in California. He played in St. Louis when the old Cleveland team was moved there. He was a pitcher, then played shortstop, and later first base. Mike—always a good player—drifted to Baltimore. When John McGraw came to New York he brought Donlin with him. Mike became a Polo Ground favorite. He was a big batting factor in the best team McGraw ever had here. New York fans were sorry when "Mike" passed up baseball for the stage. This season he "came back," confident that he could show his old batting ability. McGraw's team was working well, and he wouldn't break up the present combination.

$5,000 TO BE LIMIT FOR MINOR PLAYER

American Association Not Contemplating Placing a Club in Chicago.

CHICAGO, Aug. 1.—Seven members of the American Association of Baseball Clubs and President T. M. Chivington of the organization, after several hours wrangling in secret, reached a decision which resulted in the drawing up of a petition to be presented to Garry Herrmann, Chairman of the National Commission.

Members of the league refused to discuss the petition, but it is reported on good authority that it is based on a proposed classification clause which makes the price of a ball player not more than $5,000 when a sale is contemplated to the major leagues.

Further information is that the American Association is handicapped in purchasing a player from the minor leagues because of the present classification clause.

It is said that this feature of the petition, if acted favorably upon by the National body in baseball, will greatly assist the association team owners in drafting players.

The members of the organization who attended the secret session included President W. H. Watkins of Indianapolis, William Grayson, Louisville; E. M. Schoenborn, Columbus; Charles S. Havenor, Milwaukee; George Tebeau, Kansas City; George E. Lennon, St. Paul, and a proxy who represented M. E. Cantillon of Minneapolis. Mr. Armour of Toledo was not represented.

Reports were current that the association club owners were to take preliminary action looking toward the possible placing of an American Association team in Chicago, but President Chivington and the team owners state that such action was not even considered at to-day's meeting.

O'Toole to Join Pirates at Once.

PITTSBURG, Aug. 1.—According to reports here to-day, Pitcher Marty O'Toole, purchased from the St. Paul American Association Club by Pittsburg for $22,500, will report here for duty Friday. Report also is to the effect that the local club has closed negotiations for O'Toole's battery mate, Catcher James Kelly, and that he would arrive with O'Toole. Efforts to verify the reports to-night were futile. If O'Toole does come here Friday there has been a change in the plans of sale that have not been announced by the officials of the Pittsburg Club.

Waseda Team Sails for Home.

SEATTLE, Wash., Aug. 1.—The sixteen members of the Waseda Baseball Club sailed for Japan to-day, after completing a tour of the United States.

Tidewater League Sinks.

NORFOLK, Va., Aug. 1.—The Tidewater Baseball League collapsed completely to-day. With Portsmouth and Elizabeth City out of the race, the Hampton "Crabbers," formerly the Norfolk "Rookies," quit early to-day, and then came the announcement that Suffolk and Old Point had also disbanded.

JULNA WINS KING'S CUP.

Time Allowance Gives Sir Maurice Fitz-Gerald's Craft Victory.

COWES, Isle of Wight, Aug. 1.—The King's Cup, the blue ribbon of the annual regatta over Queen's course of forty-six miles, was won to-day by Sir Maurice Fitz-Gerald's ketch Julna on a handicap allowance. The English Waterwitch, owned by G. Cecil Whitaker, finished first, thirty-nine seconds ahead of Emperor William's Meteor, which was followed in by White Heather. There were twelve starters.

The race provided an exciting experience for the King of Spain. He was on board one of the competitors, the Nevada, which was dismasted by a squall. Fortunately, nobody on board the yacht was injured.

Alfonso had bad luck in the race for the fifteen-metre-class boats, in which his Hispania fouled the markboat and was compelled to withdraw.

NOTES OF THE GOLFERS.

The chances are that Jack Park, the well-known golf professional, recently returned to these shores after an absence of several years, will soon become identified with the Whitemarsh Valley Country Club, near Philadelphia. Years ago Park was the "pro" at the Essex County Country Club.

Jack Dowling, regarded by some persons as one of the most promising homebreds in this section, distinguished himself recently by breaking the record for the links of the Scarsdale Country Club. Dowling, who is a Scarsdale professional, went out in 33 and home in 35 for a 68, beating the previous record, also held by himself, by a stroke. His card read as follows:

Out ....4 3 2 4 4 3 5 5 3—33
In ....3 5 3 4 4 5 4 4 3—35—68

Well-known amateurs are gathering at Southampton for the annual invitation tournament of the Shinnecock Hills Golf Club, to be held there to-morrow, Friday, and Saturday. John M. Ward, who won there a year ago, will be on hand in an endeavor to score again. The course has been stiffened up a trifle, due to the addition of a few sand traps.

Conflicting with the Shinnecock meeting will be the tenth annual Vermont State championship tournament over the links of the Ekwanok Country Club at Manchester. Among those entered are D. W. Houston, last season's Princeton captain; Hamilton Kerr, runner-up to Gardiner White at Powelton; F. A. Martin, a former title-holder, and P. S. McLaughlin of Wykagyl.

Playing over the links of the Caldeno Golf Club at the Delaware Water Gap on Monday, P. C. Pulver of the Forest Hill Field Club made a 71, 38 out and 33 home. The 33 is the best returned this season, and equals last year's record. Here is the card:

Out ....4 4 4 5 5 5 5 8 3—38
In ....4 4 4 3 5 3 4 3 3—33—71

ARMY AND NAVY CUPS POLO.

New Haven Defeats Aiken and Meadow Brook Magpies Beat Cooperstown.

Special to The New York Times.

NARRAGANSETT PIER, R. I., Aug. 1.—Under lowering skies that threatened a storm which, however, did not materialize, as the sun burst out gloriously as play progressed, the third match for the Army and Navy polo cups put to a sharp test the ability of the New Haven and Aiken players. The former allowed the latter 7 goals by handicap and defeated them by a score of 14 to 10¾, the Aikens only earning 5 and losing ½ for a foul hook, ½ for hitting in front of a pony's legs, and ¼ for safety. In the first period opposition was about even for over six minutes when the superior placing from Thomas's mallet enabled Rathbone to put the ball through the goal as the period was expiring.

For New Haven, J. C. Rathbone, J. Watson Webb, J. B. Thomas, and W. L. Goodwin lined up in the order named, and for Aiken the players were J. R. Fell, E. W. Hopping, P. S. P. Randolph, Jr., and Thomas Le Boutillier. In the second period the ball was in Aiken territory for five minutes. Four times Aiken forced it back to centre field and alternately made it on a brilliant pass by Hopping. The New Havenites were superior in the third and fourth periods by reason of the determined attack and good direction displayed by Rathbone and Webb, these two players accounting for five goals up to the fourth period. Mr. Thomas was the principal aggressor in the fifth and sixth chukkers, and the Rathbone and Webb combination was again invincible toward the end of the game. The record of goals for New Haven: Rathbone, 6; Webb, 4; Thomas, 4. For Aiken: Le Boutillier, 2; Hopping, 3.

The second game on the programme was the fourth match for the Army and Navy cups and involved the Meadow Brook Magpies, Morgan Belmont, Raymond Belmont, J. C. Cowdin, and Gaspar G. Bacon, against the Cooperstown four, which included Philip Stevenson, C. P. Beadleston, H. P. Dougherty ,and F. S. Von Stade. The former won by a score of 8 goals to 3¾. For Meadow Brook the goals were made as follows: R. Belmont, 3; M. Belmont, 3; Cowdin, 2; Bacon, 1. They lost one goal on penalties. Cooperstown was allowed 1 goal by handicap. Beadleston scored 2 goals and Van Stade 2. They lost 1¼ on penalties.

Mantell Stops Schmidt.

Frank Mantell, the Pawtucket middleweight, stopped Connie Schmidt of Hoboken in eight rounds at Brown's Gymnasium last night. Schmidt gave a game exhibition, but was outclassed from the start. In the second round Mantell sent the Jersey boxer to the floor for the count of six, and in the same session sent him down again for nine seconds. Schmidt pluckily went back in the third round and stalled his way through. Mantell forced the fighting from then until the eighth, when Schmidt was in such a bad way that Referee "Bill" Brown stopped the bout.

Heavyweights at the National.

So much has been written about the professional debut to-morrow night at the National Sporting Club of the ex-champion amateur, big Tom Kennedy, that Al Palzer, the man who is to face him in the ten-round bout, has been lost sight of. Tom O'Rourke, who has Palzer in charge, however, feels confident that his man is the coming heavyweight champion of the world, and that he will knock out the clever amateur in about five rounds.

"One-Round" Hogan Coming to New York.

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 1.—"One-Round" Hogan of San Francisco left for Uew York to-day to begin training for his ten-round bout with "Knockout" Brown scheduled for Labor Day. Hogan declined an offer for a match with Freddie Welch here this month, preferring to take no chances of defeat before his match with Brown.

Al. Kaufman has received word from William Brady of New York that three matches have been obtained for him in Australia, and he will sail for Sydney Sept. 6. Kaufman will box the winner of the Lang-Lester battle in his first match.

NOTES OF THE BOXERS.

If Jack O'Brien is as anxious to mix matters as his recent telegrams would indicate he will be accommodated by Jim Smith of Westchester. According to Jimmy Johnston, who looks after Smith's interests, the latter offered two months ago to box O'Brien at the middleweight or light-heavyweight limit, but O'Brien declined, saying that he wanted two months to train. Smith clashes with Sam Langford at the Fairmont Athletic Club next week, and announces that he will be ready for O'Brien immediately after his bout with Sam.

The Twentieth Century Athletic Club announces that it has secured a big list of entries for the White Hope carnival to be staged Friday night. The list as announced by the club yesterday is as follows: Sailor White of Newark, N. J.; Al McCleskey of Elizabeth, N. J.; Soldier Delaney of New York, Jim Carroll of Camden, N. J.; Jim Clark of Allenhurst, N. J.; Jim Regan of New York, Jack Malley of New York, Bill Haas of Brooklyn, Billy Madden of Philadelphia, Jim Stark of Philadelphia, Dan Henry of Girardsville, Penn.; Arthur Pelky of Chicopee, Mass.; Barney Feeney of Tipperary, Ireland; Jim Maher of Waterford, Ireland; Joe Page of Birmingham, England, and five others.

A bout that will eliminate one strong contender from the race for the middleweight title will be staged at the National Sporting Club on Thursday, Aug. 17. The contestants will be Cyclone Johnny Thompson and Frank Klaus. The winner will probably be matched with Billy Papke in a bout for the title.

HEAVYWEIGHTS DRAW AT '20TH CENTURY'

Jeannette and Ross Box Ten Fast Rounds Before Large Crowd.

Tony Ross, the Newcastle heavyweight, and Joe Jeannette of Hoboken clashed last night at the Twentieth Century A. C. and incidentally furnished New York fistic followers with the best heavyweight bout seen here in many months. At the close of hostilities neither man had gained enough advantage over his opponent to be entitled to the decision. Jeannette, as was expected, proved himself a bit more clever from a boxing standpoint, but Ross evened matters with his aggressiveness and his strong work at infighting.

The bout was not featured by any unusual amount of clean hitting, as both men took special care of the defensive end of the game, but it was far different from the usual line of heavyweight bouts which have been inflicted on the sporting fraternity during the past year. Both men started off as if they meant business and their willingness to mix matters increased, rather than diminished, as the bout wore on. They broke for the most part at the command of the referee, did no unnecessary clinching, no stalling, and no foul boxing. At the conclusion of two rounds blows were struck after the bell had sounded, but in each case it was unintentional on the part of the boxers and no bad feeling resulted.

It was easily the best bout that Ross has ever shown around New York, and his showing gained him a host of friends. It was generally exected that the clever Jeannette would have little difficulty with his less experienced opponent and gradually beat him into submission, but it was a far different proposition that the New Jersey negro found before him last night. Both men appeared to be in good condition, and the fast work had not begun to tell on either at the conclusion of the tenth round. Jeannette had an advantage in height and reach, but he was not able to do any damage to his opponent. In the first round he opened a cut over Tony's right eye, but this was the extent of the damage inflicted.

The closing round was easily the best of the bout, and it is doubtful if a more exciting three minutes of fighting has been shown by two heavyweights here since the old days. Each seemed to realize that the man with the fastest finish would carry off the honors, and they waded into each other as if a championship depended on their efforts. Around the ring they traveled, clinched most of the time, and each working his hands like trip hammers to land effective body punches. Now and then they broke, swung hard at each other, and went into another clinch, where more fast infighting followed. The greater part of the big crowd stood and yelled themselves hoarse at the spectacle. The final bell found the two men against the ropes fighting faster than at any other time during the bout, and the noise prevented the boxers from hearing it.

The opening round was slightly in Jeannette's favor. He landed a few clean blows to Ross's head in the early part of the first round, one terrific right bringing blood from Tony's nose. Near the finish the two indulged in a fast mix-up in which Ross carried off the honors.

Ross came back stronger in the second round, and he held Jeannette even in the third round. In the fourth Jeannette again gained a slight lead, but the fifth easily belonged to Ross. In the sixth, seventh, and eighth Jeannette's boxing gave him a slight lead, but Ross had the ninth, and he finished the fast tenth round as well as Jeannette.

In the scheduled semi-final Kid Williams of Baltimore stopped Reddy Carroll of Brooklyn in the fourth round. The bout was scheduled for six rounds.

Bob Allen, the Fighting Parson, and Young Hines traveled over the four-round route to a draw in an extra bout, and Young Mooney and Babe Davis fought a four-round draw in one of the earlier preliminaries.

PETER MAHER WINS.

"Irish Champion" Knocks Out Doherty in Thirty Seconds at Fairmont.

Peter Maher, who some ten years ago was considered one of the most dangerous men in the heavyweight class owing to his great hitting ability, showed a flash of his old-time form last night at the Fairmont Athletic Club in a benefit tendered to him by his friends.

Maher was matched to box Jim Doherty of the Bronx, who in an argument declared that he was better than the old Irish champion, but when the pair came together Maher's ring experience and generalship served him in good stead and he disposed of his rival in less than thirty seconds by knocking him out with a well-directed right and left to the nose and jaw before Doherty could realize the position.

Each man had a good following on hand to cheer him on to victory, but Maher's friends prevailed, and when he ended the contest in such quick order they cheered him wildly.

Doherty had been training for the contest for several weeks, and had youth and weight in his favor. Maher, whose gray mustache and large waist line made him look like anything but a trained athlete, appeared a trifle nervous as he sat in his corner. Doherty wore a look of confidence, but when the pair were ordered to the centre of the ring by Referee Billy Joh, he soon showed his lack of experience.

SPRING LAKE HORSE SHOW SEASON HERE

New Jersey Coast Summer Colony Will Attend Exhibition Starting To-morrow.

Special to The New York Times.

SPRING LAKE, N. J., Aug. 1.—With nearly one hundred and seventy-five entries, the annual horse show of the Spring Lake and Sea Girt Country Club, which will be held on Thursday, Friday, and Saturday of this week, will be the biggest exhibition held at the local club. Among the entries are many blue ribbon winners, including many that won places at the Hollywood show last week. Boxes and parking spaces have been taken by a number of prominent people from all along the shore, it having been found necessary to provide nearly three hundred places for the automobiles and carriages.

No event is creating more interest than that for the $250 cup presented by J. W. Waring of New York. In this there are sixteen entries. The cup goes to the saddle horse which makes a six-mile trip from Asbury Park to the local show grounds, carrying up to 185 pounds, and making the best showing upon the arrival here. The contestants must reach the grounds within an hour after starting, but under no condition is the contest to be considered a race.

Another cup for which there is expected to be keen competition is the Governor's cup, which was donated by the officers in the New Jersey National Guard. Because of the New Jersey camp being in progress this week, there will be a large number interested in this event from the guard. The competition is open to officers of New Jersey, New York, and Pennsylvania, and the horse must be shown by rider in uniform.

Some of the horses shown in the saddle classes will include M. L. Schwartz's Durham, which was a big winner last week at Hollywood; H. G. McElwaine's Spring Maid, Myron H. Oppenheim's Watchful, Montgomery Chief, Jr., and Fairy Queen; Mrs. Thomas J. Regan's Mahli, and Miss Claire A. Knapp's Zulal. Among the harness horses to be shown are Mrs. C. Cecil Fitler's Pandora Queen, Sporting Extra, Florham King, and Pink Lady, while Mortimer L. Schiff will show King of the West, Queen of the West, and Baron Brown. M. L. Schwartz has entered Hob Caw, and Emil Seelig will show Royal Victoria. Mrs. Julius S. Walsh will have her pair, Honor Boy and Honor Bright, in one of the classes, and also Honor Girl in a single harness class. She has five entries in all.

In the jumpers class some of the best-known horses to appear are James Smith, 3d's, Artilleryman; Gude & Clapp's Prince Henry, C. and H. Coombs Silver Bar Donabroow Farm's Lionhart, and J. Lambert Sackett's Jackstraw. Other exhibitors will be David M. Neuberger, Miss Lucy A. Duffy, Andrew Albright, 3d.; Peter Hauck, Jr.; William E. Green, James Hutchinson, Mortimer L. Schiff, Mrs. L. M. Craig, and Miss Margaret F. Tomkins.

Among the box holders are W. H. T. Huhn, President of the club; Albert Marburg, Charles Hicks, F. S. Katzenbach, M. L. and C. Schwartz, F. W. Roebling, Jr.; Alfred N. Beadleston, Karl G. Roebling, Miss Julia S. Walsh, C. G. Roebling, Gov. Woodrow Wilson, Myron H. Oppenheim, H. H. Hewitt, and J. G. Marshall.

In addition to the regular horse show classes, which number thirty, there will be seven races during the three days' exhibition, all of them sweepstakes. These will be quarter of a mile for horses 14-3 hands or under, half-mile for galloways, three-quarter mile open, hurdle, about one mile; hurdle, about one and a half miles; hurdle, about two miles, and trotting under saddle, half-mile heats, best three out of five.

The judges for harness classes will be Charles A. Baudouine of Rye, N. Y.; Frank M. Lowery of Pittsburg, and J. F. Carlisle of New York; for saddle horses and ponies, L. E. Waring of Plainfield, Leander Riddle of Glen Riddle, Penn., and Joseph La Roque of New York; for the ponies, Frank S. Conover of Cedarhurst, L. I., and for hunters and jumpers, Messrs. Riddle and Lowery.

TO MAP TOURING ROUTES.

A. L. Westgard to Take Up Important Work for Auto Association.

A. L. Westgard, the well-known touring expert, has become identified with the National Touring Bureau of the A. A. A. in the capacity of special traveling representative. Robert Bruce, manager of the bureau, and Mr. Westgard were co-workers in the earliest stages of touring information. Mr. Westgard's first effort will be the preparation of a thoroughly up-to-date system of transcontinental routes which will be followed by similar ones covering inter-State trunk lines mostly in demand by automobile tourists. The difficulty in the past has been to obtain correct information concerning through routes without the purchase of cumbersome books.

The map system which is being perfected by the A. A. A. Touring Information Board, of which Howard Longstreth of the Automobile Club of Philadelphia is Chairman, is to be supplemented in 1912 by the "A. A. A. Tour Book," containing maps showing entrances and exits to large cities and towns and accompanied by information referring to leading hotels and garages, telegraph and express offices, with reference to points of interest in the immediate vicinity. Experience has made clear that the average tourist desires through routes in carryable form, supplemented by the essential city maps, and, in brief form, historical and other interesting facts of the country passed through.

Another disturbance is developing over the Middle Plateau and will also cause showers in the region affected. Elsewhere throughout the country the weather will be fair during Wednesday and Thursday.

Temperatures will not change decidedly in any section during the next forty-eight hours.

Winds along the New England Coast will be moderate east and southeast; Middle Atlantic Coast, moderate southeast and south; South Atlantic Coast, moderate, variable.

Steamships departing Wednesday for European ports will have moderate variable winds and overcast weather to the Grand Banks.

TOUCHARD AND LITTLE WIN.

New Yorkers Defeat McLoughlin and Bundy in Western Tennis.

LAKE FOREST, Ill., Aug. 1.—Gustave Touchard and Raymond D. Little of New York defeated Maurice E. McLoughlin of San Francisco and Thomas C. Bundy of Los Angeles in the first round of the National tennis doubles preliminaries to-day at the Onwentsia Club, 6—4, 6—4, 7—9, 3—6, 10—8.

The match was filled with tennis of the best grade, and it was nip and tuck between the two pairs from the second set on. McLoughlin and Bundy were the cleverer individual players, but the teamwork of Little and Touchard was better. McLoughlin's unsteadiness in the last set, when he had two chances to win the set and a third to save the match by taking his own service game, was largely responsible for the defeat of the Pacific Coast team. Bundy played poorly in the early part of the match, and his mechanical work was less excellent than McLoughlin's throughout, but his steadiness in the crises was what saved the Californians in several instances.

Little had one of his brilliant days, and his network was flawless. He outguessed McLoughlin, against whom he was placed, time after time, and it was only the wonderful rallying of the young San Francisco man that prevented a more crushing defeat. Touchard also displayed remarkable cleverness. His cross-court drives were of the highest order, and the combination of Little's steadiness and Touchard's brilliant driving proved to be a winning one.

It will be East against South in the final round of the National doubles preliminaries to-morrow, Touchard and Little playing H. E. Doyle and Conrad B. Doyle of Washington, D. C., brothers, who defeated O. M. Bull, Jr., and Harry Martin of New York, Western champions, 6—4, 8—6, 6—1.

The Doyle brothers were masters of the New York team from the start. Bull and Martin did not play half as well as in the Western tournament last week, and were easy victims for the Southerners. The Doyles played perfect team work, the tactics of H. E. Doyle at the net being one of the factors which gave his team the victory.

ON LOCAL TENNIS COURTS.

Speedily driving and volleying for placement, Miss Carrington won the women's singles lawn tennis championship on the turf courts of the Seabright Cricket and Lawn Tennis Club, Seabright, N. J., yesterday. Her opponent, Miss Paula Fleitman, forced the match through the limit of three sets before Miss Carrington won the title and cup at 6—3, 4—6, 8—6.

Another lively cup match was the upper semi-final of the mixed doubles, in which Mrs. George F. Tyler and Bernon S. Prentice defeated Miss Paula Fleitman and Blaine Ewing at 3—6, 8—6, 6—1.

Bernon S. Prentice, the former Harvard captain, won his place in the final of the championship singles, defeating A. A. Dederer at 6—1, 6—1. Prentice was remarkably fast on his drives, and he never missed a shot overhead. He awaits the winner of the other semi-final, Reeve Schley or H. P. Smith.

The upper bracket in the final of the doubles was filled by Reeve Schley and Bernon S. Prentice, who defeated George Carpenter and H. F. Hadden by the score of 6—2, 8—6.

Saving and Investing

The habit of saving is the first step towards investment. After a savings fund has been accumulated it should not, however, be invested until knowledge is acquired of the principles underlying conservative investment.

It is our function as investment bankers to aid investors in selecting investments that would seem to be best adapted to their requirements, and we are always ready to extend the facilities of our organization to any one seriously interested in this subject.

In these days, it is not a difficult matter to obtain investment bonds yielding approximately 5 per cent., and which, in our judgment, combine:

1. Safety as to principal.
2. Convertibility into cash.
3. Opportunity for profit.

FINANCIAL MARKETS

Stocks Sell Off in Last Hour, when Volume of Trading Increases.

MIXED RAILROAD RETURNS

Expenses Still Expanding on Some Lines—Need of Information Regarding Standard Oil Subsidiaries.

Selling pressure, which increased during the final hour, when trading was more active than at any other time during the day, brought about net losses of a point or more in a number of the leading issues yesterday. Except for the moderate show of activity toward the close of the session the dealings on the Stock Exchange were as lifeless yesterday as on any of the recent dull days. The information presented for consideration made a somewhat mixed showing, and included several factors which might explain the disposition shown in the afternoon to dispose of speculatively held stock, although to no one of them could controlling importance be attributed. Reports of damage to wheat in the Northwest, accompanied by an advance of a cent or more a bushel in the price of wheat, and a recovery in the cotton market were among the matters bearing on the crop situation which were of adverse import, although it must be said of the advance in cotton that it loses any force as an indication of lessened promise for the cotton crop, when viewed as the sequel to the prolonged decline which has taken place in the price of cotton since the publication of the last Government report. To-day another Government report is due. The disposition yesterday was to anticipate a somewhat smaller extent of improvement during July than had been indicated in earlier trade estimates. Private estimates of the condition of the crop published yesterday indicated a figure considerably below the predictions which have been current the last few days regarding to-day's report. Any improvement during July will be satisfactory, but in estimating a gain during that month of from 3 to 4 points over the Government's June 25 figures traders may well have been paving the way for disappointment, though there is every reason to anticipate that to-day's report will meet every reasonable expectation regarding the cotton crop promise.

From Washington came the news of the passage of the Farmers' Free List bill by the Senate. More was heard, too, regarding the plan for investigation of the so-called "money trust," although this matter was not brought to a head yesterday, as had been expected. Much depends, of course, upon the manner in which such an inquiry is conducted, and it still remains to be seen what form will be given to this investigation if finally the plan is carried out. Several of the principal railroad systems published yesterday their statements for the month of June. The showing was irregular. In some instances gains in both gross and net were reported, this being notably true of the New York Central Lines, while some other lines showed decreases in gross and net. This was the case with the Eastern lines of the Pennsylvania system, while the Western lines so far curtailed expenses that a decrease of over $1,000,000 in gross was converted into a small gain in net. Union and Southern Pacific succeeded in showing a fair decrease in expenses, which reduced the gross losses reported by those lines. The Atchison, on the other hand, was at greater expense to handle a decreased volume of traffic, with a resultant loss of over $500,000 in net operating revenue, which was partially offset, however, by a decrease in taxes.

One feature of the proposed Standard Oil distribution which seems particularly to concern the great body of the stockholders in that company is the announced intention of the management of the company to make this distribution without supplying the individual shareholders with any information regarding the financial status of the individual companies whose shares are to be distributed. Most of these subsidiary companies are mere names to the Standard Oil stockholders, and without more specific information regarding them than the shareholders now have they will be at a loss to place a value upon the fractional shares to which they will be entitled under the plan of distribution. The record of the Government's investigation of the Standard Oil Company supplies some information regarding the assets and earning power of that company's many subsidiaries, but it would appear that the company itself might well undertake to supplement this information in making distribution of these stocks. The need of this is made none the less great by reason of the fact that the majority stockholders immediately identified with the management of the company have at their command information regarding the subsidiary properties which is not available to the general body of the company's shareholders.

MONEY AND EXCHANGE.

Money on call loaned on Stock Exchange collateral at 2¼@2½ per cent., with the last loan at 2¼ per cent. Most of the day's loans were made at 2⅜ per cent.

CONSOLIDATED EXCHANGE.

Prices on the Consolidated Stock Exchange were tending lower throughout the day, with the most activity in the late afternoon at the lowest levels. The advance in wheat prices had an adverse influence upon sentiment. There was also much interest taken in the progress of the Farmers' Free List bill through the Senate. The extent of the commission house business in od lots was again a feature. Total transactions of 26,951 shares were distributed over a list embracing fifty-three different stocks.

Standard Oil Stock Sells Off 13 Points in Active Trading on the Curb.

CLOSES AT $645 A SHARE

Houston Oil and Bond List Also Active, While Mining Shares Find Indifferent Market.

The mining list on the Curb yesterday was almost wholly neglected, although there was a more diversified interest in the bond list and Houston Oil continued active. The last-named issue sold from 9 up to 9⅝ and closed at 9½ after transactions of 6,500 shares. Standard Oil, too, was active and reported transactions of 312 shares, selling off from 658 to 645. This compares with the highest price during July of 665 and a low price of 640. In the bond list nine issues appeared in the trading. Great Northern 4¼s, when issued, selling off from 101⅜ to 101¼ on transactions of $22,000. The new city 4¼s, which are not on the Stock Exchange list, declined from 103¼ to 103. Transactions were only $11,000.

THE EUROPEAN MARKETS.

Fears of Labor Trouble Affect London Market—Paris Bourse Strong.

LONDON, Aug. 1.—Money was abundant and discount rates continued firm to-day.

The stock market developed weakness on provincial liquidation and fears of labor trouble. Consols fell 5-16 and home rails reacted sharply, but a slight hardening occurred in the afternoon, and the market closed steadier.

American securities opened quiet and a fraction higher. The market reacted on realizing during the first hour and prices fell below parity. Later Canadian Pacific declined on selling by Berlin, and the rest of the list sagged in the absence of Wall Street support. The closing was dull.

The rate of discount in the open market for short bills is 2¼ per cent.; for three months' bills 2¼ per cent.

Gold premium at Madrid, 8.40; at Lisbon, 8.

PARIS, Aug. 1.—Prices were heavy on the Bourse to-day.

TOPICS IN WALL STREET.

Pennsylvania Earnings.

The Pennsylvania system, comprising the lines both East and West, had total operating revenues in June of $28,068,012, which is $1,535,681 under the gross earnings for June, 1910. Operating expenses and taxes were reduced $1,385,245, which still left a decrease of $150,436 in the net operating revenue. The Pennsylvania has a fiscal year corresponding to the calendar period, so that June was its sixth month. For the first half year its revenues fell off $7,837,703, of which about half was made up by lower expenses and taxes, but its net earnings for the half year were $3,875,216 less than in the corresponding part of the previous year. This furnishes a striking commentary on the dullness in manufacturing and mercantile circles in recent months. The lines west of Pittsburg suffered more severely than the lines east. The latter had gross revenues of $106,903,539, a decrease of nearly $3,000,000, while the lines west did a gross business of $49,963,444, a decrease of nearly $5,000,000.

Central's Losses.

The New York Central system's traffic has held up to previous records better than the Pennsylvania's, but the Central has had little better success in meeting the problem of higher operating costs. For the first half of 1911 the Central's gross earnings were $120,978,375, a decrease of only $451,484, but its net earnings, which amounted to $25,638,846, represented a loss of $3,163,604 from the first half of last year. Taking June by itself, the showing is not so bad; the gross earnings for the one month carried an increase of $26,347, while the net operating income gained $578,867.

New City Bonds Off Exchange.

Trading on the Stock Exchange in the receipts for the new City 4¼ per cent. bonds to which listing was denied, because Mayor Gaynor refused to award the printing to the company which the Exchange recognizes, was discontinued yesterday. The Exchange had given notice that the receipts would be taken off the list because of the recent refusal of the city officials to continue splitting up and reissuing the receipts. The new bonds themselves are now ready for delivery and the receipts cease to draw interest after Sept. 1. The new $50,000,000 city issue is now limited in its market to the Curb and over-the-counter trading. The official Curb list yesterday reported transactions of only $11,000 on which the price sold off from 103¾ to 103. The last sale on the Exchange of the temporary receipts was at 103⅜. This is the issue which two weeks ago broke to 102½ on the liquidation of a speculative holding. Its high record is 104⅝.

Better Steel Conditions.

The improvement in the steel trade which has been reported from time to time in the past two months has reached a point which puts the operations of the Steel Corporation in ingot production up to a high record for the year. The best outturn in 1911 before the recession began in March was 73 per cent. of capacity. It is now at more than 75 per cent. of capacity, according to trade authorities. A production at this rate means in tons 14,000,000 annually in round numbers. The record output for a full year was 1910's quota of 14,179,369 tons.

Copper Supplies.

A decrease of 399 tons in the European stocks of copper as reported on July 31, is offset by an increase of 525 in supplies afloat, which makes a net increase of 126 tons for the two weeks period since the previous report and leaves the European visible supply at 67,496 tons against 67,370 tons on July 15 and 90,170 tons on July 31, 1910.

STOCKS OUT OF TOWN

Several Local Issues Strong Yesterday on News of Favorable Developments.

CHICAGO BANKS MERGE

Stockholders Ratify Consolidation of Continental and Commercial with the Hibernian.

Markets at other points were irregular Tuesday, with an awakening in several specialties accompanying local developments.

In Baltimore yesterday Houston Oil continued a strong bull card, but the greatest activity was in the common stock, which was bought in large blocks and advanced nearly a point to 9⅝, reacting to 9½. Profit-taking was on a liberal scale in the preferred shares, and though Monday's high was not reached, the last sale was one point above Monday's closing. Maryland Trust was in demand on a higher level and showed a gain of four points. The advanced reflected the rise in Houston Oil shares, another helpful influence being the proposed retirement of the Maryland Trust preferred.

Following the somewhat lower prices recorded in the New York list, the undertone in the Boston market was inclined to be somewhat softer. Losses were confined to a fraction of a point, however, and there was no heavy selling in evidence in the copper shares. The general list closed steady at the recession.

Chicago Railways securities again furnished the feature of the Chicago Stock Exchange. The Series 2 certificates took the lead with an opening rise of a fraction, and on buying of a good character rose further to 33, ending the day close to the top. The Series 1 was up a point at the opening, and added another point to 100 before the close. This buying is attributed to the expectation that a dividend will be ordered before another month. Chicago Railways 5s and the 4 per cent. "B" bonds continued in demand. Other portions of the market displayed a rather irregular tendency with declines in Booth Fisheries common and the Can issues, and advances in Chicago Elevated Railways common and People's Gas.

Stockholders of the Continental and Commercial National Bank and of the Hibernian Banking Company met in Chicago yesterday and unanimously ratified the consolidation with the Hibernian. The stock of the Hibernian Banking Company was transferred to Trustees, and will be held like that of the Continental and Commercial Trust and Savings Bank, each stockholder of the Continental and Commercial National having a participating interest in the earnings of the Hibernian. The capital stock of the Continental and Commercial National Bank will be increased $1,500,000. The capital stock of the National Bank therefore is $21,500,000. There was no change in the officers of the bank, and the Hibernian will continue to operate as a savings bank at its former location.

The further upbidding of the traction stocks was the only feature of the trading on the Philadelphia Exchange yesterday. Much of the buying of late has been for New York account, and this led to the rumor that the North American Company might be acquiring an interest in the local companies. Elsewhere stagnation reigned. The arbitrage issues were rather inclined to sag, and this was also true of Tonopah Mining and U. G. I. They both, however, hardened in the afternoon. Cambria Steel, on the contrary, weakened with United States Steel.

Yesterday's transactions on the various out-of-town Exchanges as reported to THE NEW YORK TIMES were as follows:

The American Tobacco Company

Forty-Year Six Per Cent. Gold Bonds.

To the Holders of the Forty-Year Six Per Cent. Gold Bonds of THE AMERICAN TOBACCO COMPANY:

In the recent decision of the Supreme Court of the United States in the action brought by the United States of America against The American Tobacco Company and others, directions were given that proceedings be had for the purpose of ascertaining and determining upon some plan or method of dissolving the combination and of recreating, out of the elements now composing it, a new condition which shall be honestly in harmony with and not repugnant to the law, without unnecessary injury to the public or the rights of private property, and at the request of the holders of a large amount of the Forty-Year Six Per Cent. Gold Bonds of The American Tobacco Company, issued under and secured by the deed of trust dated October 20, 1904, under which the Guaranty Trust Company of New York is the Successor Trustee, the undersigned have consented to act as a committee for the protection of the interests of all of the holders of said bonds who shall become parties to an agreement now in course of preparation to be dated July 28, 1911.

Holders of said Six Per Cent. Gold Bonds are hereby requested to deposit their said bonds, (with all unmatured coupons, if coupon bonds,) with the GUARANTY TRUST COMPANY OF NEW YORK, 28 Nassau Street, New York City, the depositary to be named in said agreement, which will issue therefor negotiable certificates of deposit. All registered bonds must be accompanied by powers of attorney to transfer them to the committee.

The decree of the Supreme Court allows a period of six months for the accomplishment of its directions. In view of the shortness of this period of time and the many things to be done, the committee deems immediate and concerted action essential for the protection of the interests of the bondholders, and it therefore requests that said bonds be deposited at once, but not later than AUGUST 28, 1911.

Copies of the deposit agreement may be obtained on and after July 31, 1911, from the depositary or from the Secretary of the committee.

Application will be made to list the certificates of deposit issued by the committee upon the New York Stock Exchange.

The American Tobacco Company

FOUR PER CENT. GOLD BONDS.

To the Holders of the Four Per Cent. Gold Bonds of THE AMERICAN TOBACCO COMPANY.

(Issued under Trust Indenture dated October 20, 1904, of which the Guaranty Trust Company of N. Y. is the Successor Trustee.)

AND

To the Holders of the Fifty-Year Four Per Cent. Gold Bonds of CONSOLIDATED TOBACCO COMPANY.

(Issued under Indenture to Morton Trust Co. dated June 15th, 1901, of which the Guaranty Trust Company of N. Y. is the Successor Trustee.)

The Supreme Court of the United States, in its decision in the suit brought by the United States against The American Tobacco Company and others, has directed that proceedings be had in the Circuit Court of the United States for the purpose of ascertaining and determining upon some plan or method of dissolving the combination, and of recreating, out of the elements now composing it, a new condition which shall be honestly in harmony with and not repugnant to the law. These proceedings must necessarily affect the interest of every holder of the securities of The American Tobacco Company and of every holder of the bonds of the Consolidated Tobacco Company. The undersigned have consented, at the request of the holders of a number of the Four Per Cent. Gold Bonds of The American Tobacco Company to act as a Committee for the protection of the interests of all holders of the said bonds, and of all holders of the outstanding Fifty-Year Four Per Cent. Gold Bonds of the Consolidated Tobacco Company, who shall become parties to an agreement now in course of preparation, to be dated July 28th, 1911.

Holders of the said bonds are requested to deposit the same with the Guaranty Trust Company of New York, 28 Nassau Street, New York City, the depositary to be named in said agreement, which will issue transferable certificates of deposit therefor. All registered bonds must be properly endorsed in blank.

The Committee believes that the interests both of the holders of the Four Per Cent. Bonds of The American Tobacco Company and of the Four Per Cent. Gold Bonds of the Consolidated Tobacco Company demand that measures be promptly taken for their protection. The decision of the Supreme Court indicates that the proceedings must be completed and their purposes substantially accomplished within six months. Immediate action is therefore absolutely necessary, and the Committee requests that the said bonds be deposited at once. Deposits will be received up to and including the 28TH DAY OF AUGUST, 1911.

Copies of the deposit agreement may be had on and after July 31st, 1911, from the GUARANTY TRUST COMPANY, or from the Secretary of the Committee. It is the intention of the Committee to make an application to have the certificates of deposit issued by the Committee listed upon the New York Stock Exchange.

Holders of said preferred stock are requested to deposit their certificates on or before AUGUST 28, 1911, with CENTRAL TRUST COMPANY OF NEW YORK, 54 Wall Street, New York City, the depositary to be named in said agreement, which will issue transferable certificates of deposit therefor. All certificates must be properly endorsed in blank and bear all stock transfer stamps required by the laws of the State of New York.

As the opinion of the Supreme Court directs that a period of six months be allowed for the accomplishment of the purposes above stated, the interests of the holders of said preferred stock demand, in the judgment of the committee, immediate and concerted action for their protection, and the committee urges the necessity of an immediate deposit of said stock.

OUTLOOK IN NORTHWEST.

Northern Pacific's President Reports Condition of Crops Good.

Howard Elliott, who, as President of the Northern Pacific Railway, had more cause to be concerned over the recent Spokane and Reno "back haul" decisions of the Inter-State Commerce Commission than other railroad executives, was in New York yesterday with some cheerful views on the transportation outlook.

Mr. Elliott said that it is impossible to make any accurate estimate of the loss in revenue which his company will meet as the result of the inauguration of freight zones and the reduction in rates, but he thought that $1,000,000 a year would cover it. He is going to his home in St. Paul this week, but will return to Chicago Monday to take part in the conference of executive and traffic officers, called to discuss the situation created by the commission's ruling. Mr. Elliott thought it likely that the Northern Pacific will appeal the case to the Commerce Court. President Ripley has already announced that the Atchison will appeal.

Indications are favorable for good crops throughout the Northwest, according to Mr. Elliott. In the Northern Pacific's territory the outlook is for the biggest wheat crop since 1907, the latest estimate putting the amount which will be harvested in the country tributary to the Northern Pacific at 24,000,000 bushels, of which upward of 15,000,000 bushels should move over that road. As thrashing progresses returns are coming up to early expectations. In some sections of the Palouse and Main line territory there is a shortage in Spring wheat running as high as 10 per cent., but the acreage of that crop is unusually small, and the Winter wheat is turning out to be above the estimates which have been made. The hay crop in the Yakima Valley and Camas Prairie is the heaviest the farmers have ever had.

President Elliott is particularly pleased over the outlook in Montana, where agricultural conditions are the best that have ever been seen. In South Dakota and Southern Minnesota small grains have been hard hit by unfavorable weather, while in North Dakota the conditions are spotty and the probable harvest uncertain.

Mr. Elliott thinks that there will be less business activity resulting from the sale of this season's crops in the Northwest, because many farmers are in debt as the result of last year's partial failure. On the other hand, stocks of merchandise are low and the banks are in good condition as a result of the checking of land speculation.

Mr. Elliott says that the Northern Pacific will not have to do any financing this year and will spend little money for extraordinary improvements. The property is in good condition and is prepared to handle a considerable increase over its present traffic without adding to its facilities.

MEXICO OWNS RAILWAYS YET.

National Railways Official Disposes of Report That Government Lost Control.

D. P. Bennett, who, as Vice President, has charge of the New York offices of the National Railways of Mexico, disposed yesterday of a story to the effect that control of that company had recently passed out of the hands of the Mexican Government through the sale to New York bankers of the holdings of Gen. Diaz and the former Finance Minister, José Yves Limantour. Mr. Bennett made this statement:

Control of the National Railways of Mexico was secured by the Mexican Government through the carrying out of the terms of the plan for the consolidation of the National Railroad Company of Mexico and the Mexican Central Railway Company into the new merger corporation. In that plan it was distinctly stipulated that control should be lodged with the Federal Government. The Government secured, has held, and, so far as I know, still holds a legal majority of the outstanding stock. This control was obtained and held independently of the personal holdings of any representative of the Government.

"I have already answered the next point in part, namely, that whatever securities of the National Railways of Mexico may have been held by Gen. Diaz, Mr. Limantour, or any other representative of the Government, were entirely a personal matter with those gentlemen and had nothing whatsoever to do with the Government control of the property. Of the extent of their holdings, if any, or whether they have bought or sold, I have no knowledge.

"The recent trip of E. N. Brown, President of the company, to New York was in no sense out of the ordinary or for an unusual purpose. For many years Mr. Brown has come to New York at about this season of the year to attend to some routine business matters. This latest trip was for that purpose."

GENERAL TRADE MORE ACTIVE

This Is Disclosed by the Bank Clearings for July.

Returns of bank clearings for July, as compiled by Dun's Review, show a broadening of activity in general trade, and but a small loss compared with the statistics for the same month in the last two years. Dun's says:

Total bank exchanges for the month at all leading cities in the United States, according to the statement compiled by R. G. Dun & Co., which includes returns from 112 leading centres, aggregate $12,945,227,671, a decrease of 2.1 per cent. compared with July last year, and of 3.5 per cent. as compared with July, 1909. The losses are almost entirely at New York City, Boston, and Pittsburg, but at these cities it is small. Numerous outside cities report gains, but the improvement is more noticeable in the Southern and Central States.

At New York City the returns are more satisfactory than in the preceding months this year, notwithstanding the fact that operations on the stock market were less this year by several million shares than in the corresponding month in the two preceding years. A number of New England cities make favorable comparisons.

Decreases are still reported by several cities in the Middle Atlantic States, among them Pittsburg, where bank exchanges have been reduced by unsettled conditions in the iron market. In the South Atlantic States gratifying gains are noted at the majority of the leading cities over both years. Total exchanges reported by the cities in the Central States make a much better showing than recent preceding months, gains now appearing at some points which for some time have reported loss. In the Middle South, most of the leading cities report gains. More irregularity still prevails in the returns from cities in the West. Compared with two years ago increases are general.

TOBACCO MEN ORGANIZE.

Working Out a Plan to Insure Competition When Trust Gets Reorganized.

Uneasy lest the American Tobacco Company find a way to conform to the letter of the Supreme Court's decision ordering its dissolution without leaving the field open for free competition, a number of independent tobacco men met at the Hoffman House yesterday to decide on a plan of action whereby the independent tobacco interests will be represented in court when the American's reorganization plan comes up for approval.

It was decided to form a National Committee of Independent Tobacco Men, with Samuel H. Harris as Chairman and A. H. Hillman as Secretary. Charles Duskind was made counsel.

"The independent people regard the decision as a death warrant for the Tobacco Trust," said Mr. Harris. "But they have been given an opportunity to submit to the Circuit Court a reorganization plan whereby competitive conditions may be restored. As practical tobacco men we know that there can be no real competition among the elements now constituting the combine without a winding up of the trust through the medium of a receivership. The action of the trust since the Supreme Court decision cannot but lead to the conclusion that there is no intention on their part to affect a real dissolution or to restore real competition. Their paying of dividends upon the common stock, their extensive advertising, and their continued warfare against the independent trade at a time when they should be taking stock preparatory to a dissolution, make it apparent that they have no such end in view.

"We feel that the tobacco industry, independent of the combine, should be represented in court and submit their views as practical men when the trust's plans shall come up for consideration, to the end that we may secure real competitive conditions such as are intended by the letter and spirit of the Supreme Court decision, and hence the formation of our committee."

COMMODITY MARKETS.

WHEAT.—There was a very decided change in the character of the wheat market. Monday it opened strong and closed weak; yesterday it opened weak and closed strong, with new high levels made for the advance. The early heaviness of the market was still influenced by the enormous increase in the visible, and was also influenced by the heaviness in corn and oats. The cables were somewhat disappointing, and export bids were on an unsatisfactory basis. The European crop summary was rather bearish, with good quality of the crop in England and France, but rather light yields. The reports from Central Europe were of fair conditions. The Hungarian crop was estimated at slightly more than last year. In India the conditions are becoming more serious, owing to the delay in the monsoon. The increase in the visible supply was 7,116,000 bushels in the United States, with the world's increase of 6,871,000 bushels following an increase of 4,367,000 bushels the previous week. Before this came out, however, the market turned strong, influenced by very pessimistic estimates on the Spring wheat crop—a Chicago firm placing the total Spring wheat outturn at 205,000,000 bushels and the Winter wheat crop at only 444,000,000 bushels, a loss in total outturn of 52,000,000 bushels for the month. The loss in Spring wheat conditions was 18.4 per cent. There were reports of bad harvest weather and spreading black rust damage, and a thrashing concern was quoted as estimating the three States at only 100,000,000 bushels and Canada 150,000,000. Black rust reports also came from Canada. Cash wheat was dull, with no export sales reported. No. 2 red was quoted 95c, free on board; No. 1 Northern Spring, $1.13¼; No. 2 hard Winter, 96¾c; No. 1 Manitoba, $1.07¼.

CORN.—The market opened weak on very general rains in the corn States. Selling was active, but buying orders in rather large volume developed, and helped by the general improvement in grain, and a crop estimate by a Western firm of a corn condition at 72.4, against 80.1 last month, and an indicated crop of 2,726,000,000 bushels, or about 230,000,000 bushels less than the Government indications of last month, the market showed a strong rally, closing at a net gain for the day. The Iowa report claimed a loss of 30 per cent. in corn conditions for the month, with poor yields of other feeding grain, and the Oklahoma condition report of only 28 was confirmed. The weekly weather report was rather bullish, indicating need of rain, particularly in Nebraska and in the Eastern Ohio Valley States. Cash corn was firm, with export sales of five loads reported. The visible decreased 364,000 bushels, following 2,579,000 bushels decrease the previous week. No. 2 corn was quoted 69¾c, free on board.

OATS.—Prices opened weak with other grain and influenced by large receipts and favorable weather for the late feed crop. Western receipts gained one-third over last week in two days, and interior shipments decreased about the same proportion. The visible decreased 247,000 bushels. The report of a Western firm made oats condition 60.7, against 68.8 last month, with indicated crop 690,000,000 bushels, or about 128,000,000 bushels less than last month's promise and 435,000,000 bushels less than last year brought general buying late, the market closing at a small net gain. Cash oats were firm; standards, 46c; No. 2 white, 46½c; No. 3 white, 45½c.

PROVISIONS.—Trading was small in hog products, but prices were firm. Hog receipts were small—only 76,000 at all points. There were light offerings of futures late, and a steady close.

COTTON.

A much better tone prevailed in the cotton market the greater part of the day with final prices showing some reaction from the high point of the day, but final quotations maintained part of the day's gain. The buying during the session seemed to be partially evening up preparatory to the crop reports which will be issued to-day. Buyers of the previous day were also disposed to even up, and the volume of business was comparatively restricted. More attention was paid to the orders as they developed from time to time during the day than to the news. It was asserted that spot interests were absorbing contracts, and also that some of the large operators were buying considerable cotton. Offerings from the South were on a smaller scale, but advances found plenty of cotton to be had and buyers were rather easily satisfied. The report of The Journal of Commerce for the month made the condition of cotton 86.9, against its report of 85.9 a month ago, and 75.9 a year ago. The report of Miss Giles made a gain of 1½ for the month, with a present condition of 90.5. The estimates which have been issued generally show improvement varying from .3 to 3.5, while a year ago the declines estimated varied from 4.2 to 7.5. The reports so far issued with the Government comparisons for last month and last year follow:

	Aug., 1911.	July, 1911.	Aug., 1910.

The weather conditions were considered somewhat less satisfactory. The Government report was favorable in the weekly summary from most sections, although reporting serious drought still continuing in the Carolinas. The rain map for the day, however, showed some rains in North Carolina.

Spot cotton was quiet and unchanged at 12.50c. Contract deliveries were 3,700 bales. Southern spot markets were unchanged.

COTTONSEED OIL.

Cottonseed oil sold at new low levels at the opening, due to pressure on old crop deliveries against reported purchases of oil South, and new crop deliveries were influenced by favorable crop conditions. Later there was a steadier feeling, with some buying on the strength of lard, and there were reports of fair foreign demand for forward shipments. The close was quiet. Future quotations follow:

COFFEE.

Coffee was steadier, and the close was 1 point lower for August and 10@12 points higher for other positions. Unexpected firmness in Havre, where prices were 1@1¼f higher, inspired buying. Hamburg was without special feature, unchanged, to ¼ pfennig higher. Rio declined 50 reis, and Santos was unchanged. Cost and freight offers from Brazil advanced 10 points. Total sales were 40,250 bags.

THE REAL ESTATE FIELD

American Exchange Bank Sells Broadway Plot—Big Deal in West Fifty-Seventh Street—Investors Buying Tenement House Property—Bronx and Suburban Sales.

The most important feature of the realty market yesterday was the sale by the American Exchange National Bank to the Guaranty Trust Company of half of the plot at 132 Broadway, between Cedar and Liberty Streets. It is occupied by an old six-story structure, which has lately been vacated, and is between the American Exchange National Bank building on the Cedar Street corner and the old Mutual Life building on the Liberty Street corner, fronting 78.10 feet on Broadway.

The 132 Broadway plot is 26 feet wide and 102 feet deep. It was bought in 1906 from the Rhinelander estate for about $500,000. A few weeks ago it was announced that the bank would improve the site with a building equal in height to the seventeen-story office building, occupied and owned by the American Exchange National Bank on the Cedar Street corner. Subsequently the plan was abandoned, but the southern half of the plot retained by the bank will be improved, it is said, with a five or six story building to afford additional banking quarters.

By acquiring the upper half of this inside lot the Guaranty Trust Company will have a frontage of 91.10 feet on Broadway and, with the old building on Liberty Street in the rear of the former Mutual structure, will have a depth on that street of 135 feet.

Work has already commenced in tearing down the old Mutual Life building, which was erected in 1864, and York & Sawyer, architects for the Trust Company, have practically completed plans for the Guaranty Trust Company's new home which will contain the largest banking room in the city, with the exception of the National City Bank occupying the old Custom House plot on lower Wall Street. The new building will be about 125 feet high, but will contain only about six floors. It is expected to be ready for occupancy next Spring.

The removal of these two old buildings will complete the high-class modern improvement of the entire block front on the east side of Broadway, between Liberty and Cedar Streets. About $2,000,000 was paid for the old Mutual Life plot and the new structure will cost in the neighborhood of $1,000,000.

Big Fifty-seventh Street Sale.

One of the largest deals in the West Fifty-seventh Street section that has been reported for some time has just been made by Nathan L. Ottinger, who has acquired from various owners a plot of 75 feet on Fifty-seventh Street, between Ninth and Tenth Avenues and extending through the block, with a frontage of 50 feet on Fifty-sixth Street. The property purchased includes the old buildings at 428, 430, 432, and 434 West Fifty-seventh Street and 427 and 429 West Fifty-sixth Street. The plot contains about 12,500 square feet. A Dyckman Business Building.

Plans are being prepared by Moore & Landsiedel for a two-story taxpayer, to be erected on the triangular block fronting 105.9 feet on Post Avenue, 74 feet on Emerson Street, and 129.1 feet on Tenth Avenue, opposite the 210th Street Subway station, recently purchased by A. V. Donellan.

The improvement, including the land, will represent an investment of $50,000. This block was purchased in April, together with the triangle bounded by Hawthorne Street, Nagle and Tenth Avenues, from the estate of Isaac Dyckman, by Max Marx, who resold the former block to Donellan.

Rent Receivers.

Justice Bischoff of the Supreme Court has appointed Albert Sanders receiver of the rents of 2,302 Second Avenue, a five-story tenement, on plot 27 by 80, pending a suit brought by George von L. Meyer to foreclose a mortgage of $27,000.

Jacob Katz has been appointed receiver of the rents of 709 East 214th Street, Bronx, in proceedings brought by Theresa Foy to foreclose a mortgage of $4,500.

Jerome Wilzin has been appointed receiver of the rents of 608 and 610 West 178th Street, a five-story apartment house, in a suit brought by Charles H. Freeman to foreclose a second mortgage of $10,000. The prior mortgage is $47,000.

Notes.

Shampan & Shampan are preparing plans for a five-story and basement mill construction mercantile building, to be erected on the site known as the south side of Moore Street, 107 feet 7 inches west of Bogart Street, for Messrs. Keshin Blittstein Company, owners, on a plot, 80 feet 6 inches by 110 feet. The building was recently destroyed by fire.

Pocher & Co. have leased the building at 407 West Thirty-sixth Street for Coleman & Krauss to the Briarcliff Farms Company.

Plans have been filed for putting an electric sign on the roof of the five-story ice plant and loft building of Jacob Ruppert, at 280 to 302 East 133d Street, at a cost of $5,000. This sign will have a massive figure of Father Knickerbocker pouring beer from a bottle into a glass, the effect being in moving electric lights. R. M. Mann is the architect.

LATEST CUSTOMS RULINGS.

Gauge of Imported Liquors Must Follow the Internal Revenue Law.

In overruling a protest filed by Batjer & Co. the Board of United States General Appraisers yesterday held that imported liquors are dutiable on the basis of their condition and measurement at the standard temperature of 60 degrees Fahrenheit, prescribed by the Secretary of the Treasury. This is the rule adopted in gauging liquors under the internal revenue law. According to Judge Somerville, who writes the decision for the board, the internal revenue rule appears reasonable and valid.

The decision states that it is a matter of common knowledge that the volume of whisky or wines will expand or contract according to the temperature. If a certain amount of this liquor had been imported in the month of August or September, when the temperature is very high, its volume would be evidently greater than if it had been imported in December. It is held that unless the regular rules are followed the same goods would be held to be dutiable at different amounts of duty according to their time of arrival. Judge Somerville says:

"The contention that duty should be assessed on the actual quantity of liquor and spirits in the condition in which imported furnishes no ground for opposing the view we take. A mere diminution of the weight or measure of merchandise is not such a change of condition as to affect the classification of the whisky, as contended by the importers. The protests are overruled."

$1,000 Savings Paid for Funeral.

RIDGEFIELD, Conn., Aug. 1.—One thousand dollars, saved by rigid economy during a lifetime of eighty years by Mrs. John Spadon, was spent yesterday, in accordance with her dying wish, in providing the most elaborate funeral procession ever witnessed in Ridgefield. A uniformed band of forty pieces led the procession, followed by a party of children loaded down wth costly floral offerings. Then came two hundred men, marching four abreast, and finally four hundred friends and acquaintances in carriages.

BANKRUPTCY SALES.

HALSTEAD AND COMPANY, BANKRUPT.—Bankrupt sale of plant and property of Halstead and Company, located at Seventeenth and Coles Streets and Jersey Avenue and Sixteenth Street, Jersey City, N. J.

The undersigned will sell at public auction on the premises on Tuesday, August 8th next, at 2 P. M., the following property:

1. The lard refinery building and lands.
2. Two lots, with 8 tanks thereon, capacity of each tank 2,500 gallons.
3. The packing house.
4. The power plant.
5. The stable property on S. W. corner of Jersey Avenue and Sixteenth Street, 125 feet by 100 feet.
6. Fifty-one tank cars.
7. Three open dressed hog cars, now at Newark Stock Yards, Harrison, N. J., and other property.

The lard and packing plants are connected by switch and sidings with D., L. & W. and Erie Railroads, and have belt connections with all roads entering Jersey City; are distant about ¾ of a mile from Hudson River, with easy trucking facilities to Erie, D., L. & W., and P. R. R. ferries. Said two plants with power house occupy substantially a city block, and are modern, up to date structures, built of brick and heavy factory construction. The packing house has about 37,500 square feet refrigerated, and a total floor space of about 67,500 feet. The plants are not only valuable for the uses for which they were constructed, but can readily be converted into cold storage and other business uses requiring heavy construction.

The premises may be inspected on application on the premises between 9 A. M. and 5 P. M., except Saturdays, and on Saturdays from 9 A. M. till 12 M.

How a Cozy Room is Found.

Question—How did you find such a cozy room, so convenient to business and such a pleasant outlook? It is well cared for, too, and the surroundings are mighty pleasant.

Answer—Where I was living I got discouraged with the place, poor accommodations and indifferent care, so I looked over the "Furnished Rooms" advertised in The New York Times, investigated and engaged it, and in I moved.

¶ Such are the experiences of those who profit by the opportunities present every day in the "Furnished Room" columns of The New York Times.

WANTED—THE RIGHT MAN AND TEN THOUSAND DOLLARS.

Our company requires a man at its helm, who is a capable business executive and sales manager of initiative and ideas—a man who can see a blazed trail and market a commodity for which a great demand already exists, and for which, when the business is properly conducted and expanded there will be an almost unlimited sale.

The business, now in its infancy, is clean, legitimate, and interesting. Splendid results await the incoming of the right man with the spirit of enthusiasm and hustle. The product can be produced and sold at an immense profit with the growth of the business and improvement of manufacturing and selling methods.

It is absolutely essential that the man wanted have at his disposal for immediate investment in the business, ten thousand dollars, to be used as needed; probably at the rate of $1,000 weekly. This money is to be used exclusively in manufacturing and exploiting the company's product, and will be disbursed by the man who puts it up and gets the job. He will get a salary and participate in the profits of the company. In addition, working with several others of his own calibre similarly interested, the right man should be able within a year or so to cash in his investment, if he so desires, on a basis that would make his original contribution seem the tiny acorn that became the sturdy oak.

This is distinctly and surely an unusually profitable, square deal opportunity for the desired man with the requisite capital, but the man without the money or the money without the man would be useless.

If you are the man and can qualify for the job, under the conditions outlined, address in confidence for interview, TEN THOUSAND, Box W 186 New York Times.

Mere curiosity seekers, alleged brokers and kindred souls not able to make good financially and otherwise may save their stationery and stamps.

Over $500,000,000 per year will soon be produced from the wheat fields of Western Canada, the last remaining undeveloped region on the continent, the Last Empire of Great Opportunities. You can share in the new wealth, get an interest in the natural resources of the Last and Greatest West, by our "Participating Unit Plan," upon the payment of only $10 per month for 10 months. Risk eliminated by Special Non-Forfeit of Payment clause, which transforms what has heretofore been speculation into safe and conservative investment. $400,000,000 of new capital being invested and 375,000 new settlers arriving in Western Canada this year. Its resources will quickly be in the hands of private individuals. If you should be one of those individuals write at once for full information. WE WILL PROVIDE IN OUR BUILDING AT 56 AND 58 COOPER SQUARE, (CORNER 7TH STREET AND 4TH AVE.,) ONE ENTIRE FLOOR WHERE SKILLED WORKMEN OF ALL KINDS CAN CONGREGATE MORNINGS FOR THE PURPOSE OF BEING INTERVIEWED BY PROSPECTIVE EMPLOYERS. WE WILL ALSO PROVIDE ON ANOTHER FLOOR SPACE FOR UNSKILLED WORKMEN.

EMPLOYERS ARE RESPECTFULLY REQUESTED TO SEND THEIR REPRESENTATIVES TO THE ABOVE ADDRESS WHENEVER IT IS POSSIBLE TO DO SO IN PLACE OF TELEPHONING, SO AS TO PERSONALLY SELECT THE MEN NEEDED. THIS METHOD OF BRINGING EMPLOYER AND EMPLOYEE TOGETHER WILL NOT ONLY DO AWAY WITH THE BOTHER OF ADVERTISING, BUT WILL BE OF BENEFIT TO THE WORKING MEN AND ADVANTAGEOUS TO EMPLOYERS. AS IT IS NOW, IT IS IMPOSSIBLE FOR THE WORKING MAN TO CALL IN RESPONSE TO THE MANY ADVERTISEMENTS FOR HELP IN HIS LINE APPEARING IN THE DAILY PAPERS. AT THE PLACES HE IS ABLE TO CALL, HE FREQUENTLY IS NOT ACCEPTED FOR ONE REASON OR ANOTHER, AND BY THE TIME HE ARRIVES AT OTHER PLACES HE IS TOO LATE. THIS CAUSES HIM TO BE OUT OF EMPLOYMENT DAYS AT A TIME, AND EMPLOYERS FREQUENTLY HAVE TO REPEAT THEIR ADVERTISEMENTS BEFORE THEY SECURE THE SUITABLE MEN, SO IT CAN READILY BE SEEN THAT BY HAVING ONE PLACE WHERE EMPLOYERS AND EMPLOYEES CAN MEET, IT WILL SAVE BOTH NOT ONLY TIME AND MONEY, BUT A GREAT DEAL OF TROUBLE.

EVERY MAN SEEKING EMPLOYMENT MAY HAVE THE BENEFIT OF OUR SERVICES FREE OF CHARGE UNTIL HE ACTUALLY SECURES EMPLOYMENT THROUGH US, WHEN A SMALL FEE WILL BE CHARGED.

Notice is hereby given that, in pursuance of the decree of foreclosure and sale made in this cause on or about the twentieth day of July, 1911, and filed in the office of the Clerk of the Court at Columbus, Ohio, foreclosing the mortgage and deed of trust dated April 14, 1903, made by Alma Cement Company to The Standard Trust Company of New York, as Trustee, I, James O. Said lands in township ten of range seventeen, being in Clinton township, Vinton County, Ohio, and in the district of lands subject to sale at Chillicothe, Ohio.

The aggregate acreage of this second parcel being 3364.

This grant being subject to all legal highways, the right of way of The Hocking Valley Railway, and a lease of about ten acres, now held by The Vinton County Coal & Mining Company.

Together with the appurtenances thereunto belonging, or in any wise appertaining, and the reversion and reversions, remainder and remainders, rents, issues, and profits thereof; and all and singular the mills, factories and structures now situate on the property hereinbefore described, or any part thereof; and all machinery, fixtures, tools, appliances and property of every kind and description forming a part of the manufacturing plant and equipment of such properties and premises; and all rights, liberties, privileges and franchises which are now the property of or used for or in connection with the business of the Company, including trade-marks, trade-names, processes, franchises, patents, patent rights, copyrights, licenses, and inventions of every kind and nature whatsoever; and any and all real property and all the estate, right, title, interest, property, possession, claim and demand whatsoever, as well in law as in equity, of Alma Cement Company, of, in, and to the above-described premises and property, and every part and parcel thereof.

The Special Master will receive no bid from any one who shall not first deposit with him as a pledge that he will make his bid good in case of acceptance, the sum of $5,000 in cash or by certified check on any National Bank or Trust Company, or bonds issued under and secured by the said mortgage and deed of trust of the aggregate face amount of $25,000. The deposit received from any unsuccessful bidder will be returned to him when the property shall be struck off. The deposit received from the successful bidder shall be applied on account of the purchase price. The Special Master will accept no bid of less than $500,000, and unless such sum shall be bid the sale will be adjourned. Upon the acceptance of any bid the bidder shall forthwith deposit with the Special Master the sum of $15,000 in cash or by certified check on any National Bank or Trust Company, or $75,000 face amount of said bonds; but any cash or bonds which may have been previously deposited by the successful bidder as a pledge that he would make good his bid, shall be received on account of the amount required of him upon the acceptance of his bid. In lieu of the actual deposit of bonds with the Special Master for any purpose aforesaid, he will accept the certificate of any National Bank or Trust Company that it then holds subject to his order the amount of bonds required with all unmatured coupons attached. In case any bidder shall fail after acceptance of his bid, to comply with any order of the Court relating to the payment thereof or the completion of the purchase, the sums deposited by such bidder, whether paid in cash or by certified check or represented by bonds or certificate, shall be forfeited as a penalty for such failure and shall be applied to the payment of the expenses of a resale and toward making good any deficiency or loss in case the property shall be sold at a less price on any resale, and to such other purposes as the Court may direct. If the Court shall not confirm the sale for which a deposit shall have been made, either by cash, by certified check, in bonds or certificate, such deposit shall be returned to the bidder.

The purchaser or purchasers shall, on the confirmation of the sale by the Court, make such further payment or payments in cash on account of the purchase price as the Court may direct. So much of the purchase price as may not be required by the Court to be paid in cash may either be paid in cash, or the purchaser may turn in to the Special Master bonds and coupons of the defendant, Alma Cement Company, issued under and secured by its said mortgage and deed of trust, and shall be credited on account of the purchase price for bonds and coupons so turned in with the amount which would be paid in cash upon such bonds and coupons out of the net proceeds of sale if the whole amount of the purchase price were to be paid in cash.

The purchaser as part of the consideration for such sale and in addition to the price bid, shall take the property subject to any liens which may have been or may hereafter be established as having priority over said mortgage and deed of trust.

The Special Master will provisionally accept the highest bid made at the sale, and if such bid shall thereafter be confirmed by the Court, and the purchaser shall complete his purchase either by payment of cash, or by payment in bonds to the extent and as permitted in said decree, or by payment partly in cash and partly in bonds, then the purchaser shall forthwith be let into possession of the property and premises sold.

For a more detailed statement of the terms and conditions of the sale, reference is hereby made to said decree on file with the Clerk of the United States Circuit Court for the Southern District of Ohio, Eastern Division, at Columbus, Ohio.

Dated Columbus, Ohio, August 2, 1911.

OIL TRUST STOCKS PUZZLING BROKERS

No Means at Hand to Determine Value of Subsidiaries That Have Been Merged.

PROBLEM OF BROKEN LOTS

Aid Toward Appraisements Given in Earnings of Subsidiaries Published Now for the First Time.

Stockholders in the Standard Oil Company are left entirely at sea by the apparent intention of the officials of the New Jersey corporation to comply with the Supreme Court's order and divide up the stocks of the subsidiaries without any further enlightenment on the subject of the securities than the information just issued of the dates on which the company's books will close.

Brokers who are carrying Standard Oil shares for customers were besieged yesterday with requests for information, but were unable to supplement the information contained in the company's circular. At 26 Broadway, Standard Oil headquarters, it was reiterated yesterday that the company had nothing further to give concerning the underlying companies, their financial standing, or earning power. There was an indication that stockholders will endeavor to get together for their own protection. The large stockholders in the Standard Oil Company are men closely identified with its affairs, and, of course, in a position to know the relative values of the securities of the subsidiaries which they will receive, but the great majority of the 6,000 stockholders have holdings estimated at less than fifty shares each, and because of the high price of the stock there are probably more names on the books with lots of from one to a dozen shares to their credit than is the case with any other big corporation.

It is these small holders who will be left in the hardest position, and various plans were talked of yesterday for their relief.

Following a suggestion printed in THE TIMES, that the situation might be relieved by some trust company or banking house accumulating deposits of the fractional shares and issuing receipts which would participate pro rata in the dividends accruing on the various shares, the Stock Exchange house of Swartwout & Appenzellar advertised yesterday inviting prospective holders of fractional scrip to communicate with them before selling their allotments, with the idea of forming such a coalition of shares.

Bunching the Fractional Lots.

As was pointed out in THE TIMES yesterday, the division of the stocks of some of the subsidiaries would allow as little as seven and fourteen one hundredths cents in par value on each share held by a Standard Oil Company of New Jersey shareholder

One of the difficulties in handling the fractional lots unless they are deposited is best illustrated in the case of the Washington Oil Company. Each Standard Oil stockholder gets for each share he owns exactly 7 14-100 cents in Washington Oil stock, figured at par, or $100 a share. Therefore in order to own a full share of Washington Oil stock he would have to be the owner of 1,400 shares of Standard Oil stock. On anything less than a full share a dividend could not be collected. By the deposit of all these fractional shares the dividends could be collected and divided pro rata.

There would remain then only the problem of what the stocks are worth. This was met by one banker yesterday with the suggestion that the depository idea might be carried a step further by the issuance of deposit certificates, which, representing all of the thirty-three stocks distributed, might be marketed at approximately the present price of Standard Oil shares.

"A holder of even one hundred shares of Standard Oil stock," this banker pointed out, "will receive for the most part fractional lots, and in shares of thirty-odd companies of which he knows nothing. It would be difficult probably for him to sell or hypothecate them, for the prices would probably be arbitrary and a holder would consequently be at a loss to act without knowing the actual or future value of any one stock. Certificates of deposit could easily be sold or hypothecated and would obviate any reason for trading in the shares of the constituent companies."

There was some disposition on the part of Standard Oil stockholders yesterday to see significance in the peculiar wording of the company's announcement. This said: "Obedience to the final decree in the case of the United States against the Standard Oil Company of New Jersey and others requires this company to distribute or cause to be distributed ratably to its stockholders the shares of the following companies."

The Ray of Hope.

In the phrase "or cause to be distributed" these observers saw a possible intention on the part of the company to turn over the business of distribution to some trust company or agency which might undertake to group the shares into units for dividend purposes or establish some basis on which the underlying stocks in fractional lots might be disposed of.

In the absence of any definite assurance of relief from the chaos which is expected to result from the dismemberment of the New Jersey corporation, stockholders were keen yesterday for any information obtainable as to the financial standing and earning power of the companies in which they will receive stock. The difficulties of their position are illustrated by the wide discrepancies in the capitalization and assets as well as earning power of the thirty-three subsidiaries.

Some are so undercapitalized that annual earnings have amounted to 100 per cent., and in one instance to 1,052 per cent. One of the number by contrast earned a deficit of some 5 per cent. on the capital in 1906, the only year for which figures are available, and had assets of 6 per cent. less than capitalization. In another instance assets at the end of 1906 represented more than twenty-four times the capitalization.

These discrepancies are illustrated in this table which sets forth capital and assets of thirty-two of the companies whose stocks are to be divided:

*Union Tank Line, a private car line, made losses in 1906 [illegible]

[illegible] earned on its own business, which will be continued after the divorce from the subsidiaries, some $9,300,000. The thirty companies, more or less, which are not included in the court's decree earned in addition some $8,000,000 more. The figures, however, are modified by the fact that the Standard Oil Company does not own the entire capitalization of a number of these companies, though it owns all or approximately all in most instances.

EDISON GOING ABROAD.

Sails To-day for First Visit to Europe in Twenty-two Years.

Thomas A. Edison will sail at 9 o'clock this morning for his first European vacation in twenty-two years. The inventor was not flurried, but put in most of his last day at home working in his laboratory.

His son, Charles Edison, will go with him, and they will meet Mrs. Edison and their daughter, Miss Madeline Edison, in London. The party expects to spend two months touring England and the Continent.

Close application to work in his laboratory on improvements to the phonograph and the storage battery kept Mr. Edison from taking his usual Winter rest at his home in Florida, and for that reason Mrs. Edison was unable to prevail on him to join her in Europe this Summer.

On the occasion of his last visit to Europe Mr. Edison met a number of famous foreign scientists, among them Eiffel, Helmholtz, Pasteur, and others. One night when he went to the Paris Opera House the management, apprised of his coming, watched for him, and when he entered the audience rose, while the orchestra played the "Star-Spangled Banner."

Mr. Edison and his son have engaged passage on the steamship Mauretania.

UNDUTIFUL CHILDREN CUT OFF

Mrs. Zborowsky Leaves Nothing to Two Who Did Not Love Her.

The will of Mrs. Margaret Laura Zborowsky, a "resident of the United States," who died on July 9 in Canterbury, County of Kent, England, was filed yesterday with the Surrogates' office. She left a large amount of real and personal property, but cut off a son and daughter.

After stating that she has made a will in England bequeathing much of her personal property to her son Louis, she cuts off her son and daughter, Hubert de Stuers of Canterbury, England, and Margaret de Stuers Oberndorff, residing in the German Embassy in Vienna, giving as her reason their lack of respect and love, and because they or their father have retained furniture, antiques, and works of art valued at $100,000, to which they had no right, when she obtained a decree of divorce from their father. The will is dated Feb. 28, 1910, with a codicil dated Jan. 12, 1911. Henry Morris and David B. Ogden of New York are made executors.

The residuary estate is left in trust to the executors, the income to be paid to her son Louis until he becomes of age, when he is to receive the principal. She also desires that he be educated in England. Arthur Lewin and Alice Talmidge Euthoven are appointed his guardians.

The codicil states that she has purchased an estate in County Kent known as "Higham" to give her son Louis a permanent residence in England.

CAR SMASHES AN AMBULANCE

Bellevue Doctor Badly Hurt, but Patient Escapes Injury.

An ambulance on its way to Bellevue Hospital with a patient last night was struck near Twenty-first Street by a Second Avenue car, and Dr. Cody, who was on the rear seat of the ambulance, was seriously hurt. The patient was uninjured, but the ambulance was badly damaged. Witnesses said the accident was due to the negligence of the motorman.

The ambulance was taking Thomas Allen, a driver, of 271 Bowery, to the hospital from the Fifth Street Station suffering from kidney trouble. As the ambulance speeded up Second Avenue a big moving van was directly in front of it, moving slowly on the car tracks. It was impossible for the driver of the ambulance, John McGann, to pass to the right of the van, so he swung to the south-bound tracks. As he did so a south-bound car struck the ambulance. The two right wheels of the ambulance were ripped off.

Dr. Cody was knocked to the floor alongside of the patient, who was yelling with terror. McGann saved himself by leaping to the ground. Policeman Sullivan summoned another ambulance, and Dr. Brundage took Dr. Cody, who was badly bruised and cut, and the other patient to the hospital.

GIRL DIES IN HOT BATH.

Probably Fainted in the Tub and Was Scalded to Death.

Miss Lucy Hockman of 911 Fox Street, a young stenographer, was scalded to death early yesterday morning in the bathtub in her home. Coroner Schwannecke had his physician, Dr. Rigelman, perform an autopsy on the girl's body, in the belief that she might have killed herself, and because, also, of the fact that he found what he thought were bruises on her head and body. Dr. Rigelman decided that these were caused by the scalding water, and he found no trace of poison. It is his belief that the girl fainted and fell into the tub after she had set the water running. Miss Hockman suffered from insomnia and was about to take a warm bath to induce sleep.

LOWEST INFANT DEATH RATE.

Health Department Saved 731 More Babies Last Month Than in July, 1910.

Health Commissioner Lederle announced yesterday that the efforts of the Health Department and the allied organizations striving to reduce infant mortality have succeeded this year in establishing the lowest July record since the consolidation of the boroughs. In July, 1911, 1,522 infants under one year of age died, which is a saving of 731 over 1910, when 2,253 died. Previous to this year, 1909 had the lowest record for July, which was 1,757.

THE ABERNATHYS START.

The Colonel and Louis Go Ahead, Leaving Temple Ill at Coney Island.

Col. "Jack" Abernathy, father of the Abernathy boys, and Louis, his elder son, were reported yesterday in Hastings, N. Y., on their way on horseback to California.

The party, with Temple, the younger boy, were to have left Coney Island at midnight Monday, but Temple was taken sick and is now in the home of Dr. J. W. Pierce in West Eighth Street, Coney Island. No one there last night knew that the father and elder brother had started on their journey without Temple.

STABS RICH MINE OWNER.

Daniel B. Zimmerman Attacked by Antonio Sicilian, Who Is Arrested.

SOMERSET, Penn., Aug. 1.—Daniel B. Zimmerman, a wealthy coal operator and ranch owner, is in a serious condition to-night from knife wounds inflicted to-day by Antonio Sicilian. Sicilian, who is locked up under $5,000 bond, charged with intent to kill, attacked Zimmerman at the Ralphton mine of the Quemahoning Coal Company, six miles from here. The coal operator is believed to have been saved from death by maps, lead pencils, and other articles in the breast pockets of his coat. The knife, however, cut through all of these and made serious wounds on Zimmerman's chest. There also are cuts on the abdomen, arms, and legs.

Zimmerman and Sicilian have engaged in a number of lawsuits, it is said, during the past year. Sicilian wanted to open a store on the coal company's property at Ralphton, but permission was refused. At another time Sicilian attempted to erect a house over a main supplying Ralphton with water. The foundation cut off the main and shut off the water, and the coal company obtained an injunction against him.

MRS. JENKINS FIGHTS SUIT.

Declares Mortgage She Gave Was Obtained by False Representations.

Mrs. Helen Dwelle Jenkins, the chief Government witness in the case against Nathan Allen and John R. Collins, charged with smuggling jewels and gowns to the value of over $100,000, was served with papers yesterday in a suit to foreclose a mortgage given by her on the premises at 39 West Eighty-sixth Street. The suit is brought by Rebecca B. Powell, Isabel P. Harned, and Ethel P. Delamater through their attorney, David H. Taylor.

The mortgage was given by Mrs. Jenkins to cover part of the purchase price on the property, and the foreclosure is asked for on the grounds that Mrs. Jenkins failed to pay an installment of $10,000, due on March 17, 1911, together with interest, amounting to $1,500.

Mrs. Jenkins has brought a counter suit, in which she claims $30,500, given by her as part payment for the premises, and declares that the mortgage was wrongfully procured through false representations.
